WAR SUMMARY

Hindenburg is reported as saying that he welcomed the entrance of Roumania into the war because it gave an opportunity to get out of trench warfare. This is illuminative. It indicates that the new dictator of Germany's military policy is not disposed to stand altogether on the defensive and seek to fire out the Allies in that way, but will take chances in the open field in the hope of reaching a decision.

This will be good news to the chiefs of the Allied armies. Germany on the defensive with a shortened front, such as von Falkenhayn was understood to favor, would have been far more formidable than a Germany on the offensive all along the eastern front, which is the Hindenburg idea. The invasion of Roumania, the first of the Hindenburg strokes, is not the procession that the new German Chief of Staff expected it to be. Mackensen has been successful in occupying most of the Dobruja, but he has failed entirely in destroying the Russo-Roumanian army that defended the territory. Falkenhayn quickly swept the Roumanians out of Transylvania, but he has had to fight hard for every foot of land secured in the passes of the Transylvanian Alps.

Berlin reports a success for German troops in the Valley of the Alt, south, east of the Red Tower Pass, where the Germans are well over the summit. There, it is stated, several tenaciously-defended Roumanian positions on the heights to the east of the river have been taken by storm, and the prisoners have been captured during the recent fighting. The most dangerous thrust of the Germans—that south through the Predical Pass toward Bucharest by way of the Pralova Valley—makes little progress. Bucharest announces the repulse of two enemy attacks here north of Azuga, which indicates that the Germans have made little or no progress in the Pralova Valley for almost a week.

all their attacks have been beaten back. Petrograd makes no mention of the fighting in its latest official statements, but private messages to London indicate that the battle is developing into one of great importance. Having failed to break the German line in Galicia to the east of Halicz, Brusiloff has apparently returned to Volhynia, where his greatest successes were won in June and July.

There has been obstinate fighting, which still continues, in the hilly region to the southeast of Monastir. The Serbs and French are attacking and have gained some advantage, but have not as yet forced the Bulgars out of their positions. James Blake, an expert oil driller from Petrolia, was killed in Egypt by the capture of a derrick. Mr. Justice Riddell in the Assizes, gave warning that attempts had been made to influence jurors.

Keep Out the Weeds. Weeds unchecked will ruin the crop. It isn't sufficient to plough and sow well in Spring and Fall and leave the rest to nature. There are weeds to fight. There are weeds in Business, too—weeds of competition and opposition—of public indifference from without, and of lack of enterprise from within—weeds that unchecked seriously retard business growth. Cultivation is the only effective weed-killer. Keep cultivating and the weeds never get a chance to thrive. There is a combination plough and harrow, fertilizer and spray, for every business—an effective weed-killer that will keep out the weeds. It is Advertising. It is not enough to plough and sow well with advertisements in Spring and Fall and leave the rest to human nature.
