A Splendid Success.

The Border Cities Star.
The 16th annual convention of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress which concluded at Windsor on Saturday, was marked by some and capable handling of the various important matters coming before the delegates for session. Early forecasts of the probability of the convention being stamped into radical action, appear, happily, to have had little foundation. Either that or the alleged radicals met so little encouragement that they refrained from making a record of a large amount of business transacted in a way that brings nothing but credit to the men at the head of affairs.

other overseas dominions of Great Britain. Though urged to do so, the congress refused to go further than this.
Canada's 16th Labor parliament had a record of work well done. Reports presented show that the Labor movement is making steady and satisfactory progress in the Dominion. Many reforms have been secured and others will come. Canadian Labor is working on the right course — constitutional action that will achieve a great deal more. The long run than more spectacular methods employed elsewhere.
President Casey, Secretary McEwen and others of the Dominion Council are deserving of hearty congratulations on the success that has attended their efforts. The success in providing the reception and accommodation of so many delegates and of preparing and carrying out a week's programme of important events, was no small one. They accomplished it in a manner that does them real credit.

Respect the Law.

By Ellis Scarles, Editor United Mine Workers Journal.

When man violates the laws of the land, and refuses to recognize constituted authority he immediately becomes a criminal who is no longer entitled to the respect and confidence of the people. Defiance of the law and of property and loyalty constitute authority is about the meanest depth to which an individual may fall. It matters not what his grievance may be nor what he may hope to gain by such conduct. The fact that he is a laborer and a lawbreaker is the thing that puts on him the stain of dishonor. The same is true of those individuals who violate the laws of the trade union and defy the authorities of their organization. Such men receive themselves from that great body of membership that stands loyal to the principles of the union. Unfortunately, the number of such law violators is relatively small, when compared with the great mass of the membership, but they are sufficient in number to bring discredit on the union and to arouse in the mind of the public a distrust of the organization in general. They are a menace to the best interests of the union and its membership.
In many such cases the vicious conduct of such men is due to a burning desire to run the union to suit themselves and their own peculiar notions. They proceed on the theory that if they cannot run it they will destroy it. In other cases it is due to natural-born carelessness and an inclination to stir up as much trouble as possible. There is an ingrained tendency toward opposition to all forms of law and order. Such men refuse to be bound by any law, rule or authority. They do not count the suffering, misery and woe that they bring upon their fellow-workers by their conduct.

Whether a man belongs in one class or the other, his conduct is none the less reprehensible. No nation can survive unless its people have respect for law and order. It cannot last unless its people respect the law and authority that has been constituted by the laws of the land. When the people flout the law and disregard authority anarchy follows. And no nation which counts itself as being civilized will for a moment permit anarchy to gain a foothold.
The public always is willing to be suspicious of a labor union, even though there is no reason for a suspicion. The union has a continual battle to fight for the maintenance of public esteem. The conduct of those who breed contempt for the laws of the union and of its constituted authority encourage distrust of the union by the public. They cause the people to gain the impression that those really represent the union and that the entire union membership is like them. Thus the influence of the union is impaired to that extent.
If these law violators and trouble-makers would devote as much time and energy to helping to build up the union as they do to tearing it down they would be more valuable as members and they would help to place the organization on that high plane where it belongs.
It is the sacred duty of every member of the union to be loyal to the principles and policies of the organization. They owe it to their fellow members to respect the authority of their legally chosen officials and to carry out in every particular all orders and directions issued by them. Nothing short of a suspicion of a labor union, even though there is no reason for a suspicion. The union has a continual battle to fight for the maintenance of public esteem. The conduct of those who breed contempt for the laws of the union and of its constituted authority encourage distrust of the union by the public. They cause the people to gain the impression that those really represent the union and that the entire union membership is like them. Thus the influence of the union is impaired to that extent.
