SYNOPSIS (Continued)

ficer Chopin in the shape of a tintype; his blood rises to 110 degrees above the limit. To satisfy his appetite he climbs a tree and awaits developments. Hogan forms a cruel compact with Mrs. Casey. Brogan terribly excited. The skeleton in the Brogan family begins to come out. The Brogans confused. The accusation. The denial. Brogan in the sun. Baldy Sours has a spasm. Brogan in the Guard House; he receives refreshments from Liz and Luke (nit). Hogan rejoices at Brogan's position, and uses his hypnotic influence that Brogan breaks loose. Hogan takes to the woods. Brogan takes an axe in close pursuit. Terrible excitement. Explosion of powder house. Hogan and Brogan in the wreck. "Save me, save me!" "I'll have his life."

During Act. II., specialties will be introduced by Mazie King, La Petite Dansense, W. J. Hogan in pleasing ballads; Eddie O'Dell, in nick-nack; Liz and Luke off for Coney Island.

ACT III.—Original Hogan's Alley roof garden. Time, next day. Luke making preparations for the grand fete. He meets an old friend and they compare notes. Mrs. Casey in search of Hogan. The Hogan Cycle Club visits the roof. Mrs. Brogan in search for information, but gets none from Hogan. She's as cold as an ice wagon. Nellie in search of her mother. Hogan and Brogan face to face. Brogan not well. Hogan prescribes for him. He gives him the glad hand, and Brogan is himself again. Hogan sings a song. Luke objects. Hogan drops. Brogan tumbles. Plot thickens. Go with your lover. Hogan becomes defiant. "I'll blow your brains out. The duel on the roof. He's killed, he's killed! The attempt at suicide. Don't shout! The explanation. Everybody satisfied, and Hogan and Brogan are friends again.

During Act III., specialties will be introduced by Thompson and Bunnell, musical specialties; the Belles of Beauty Row, and Gilmore and Leonard, Ireland's Kings. Published by Jos. W. Sims, N. Y. City.

The words and music of the following songs, introduced during the action of the play, were written by Gilmore and Leonard: "Hogan's Home Again," "Down to Coney Isle," "New York Town," "Don't Say Good-Bye Forever," and "Take Me to Your Heart Once Again."
