QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

LEG BANDS—HENS' NESTS.

1. Am desirous of going heavier in the poultry business than I have. I keep Barred Rocks, and it is difficult to tell them apart, as they are all the same color.

2. Give a good plan for hens' nests that may be kept clean.

ENQUIRER.

Ans.—1. The best, simplest and cheapest means of differentiating these fowls is to use numbered leg bands. Order from poultry-supply firms advertising in this paper.

2. No especial design is necessary in order to keep nests clean, but the strip which serves as the front of the nest may be nailed on lightly so that it may be easily removed, and tipping the nest or row of nests forward will quickly remove litter and rubbish, and permit the use of disinfectant solutions, or vermicides when desired.

WATER RIGHTS.

I have a stream of water running through my farm, and I intend to build a pond on the stream for a trout pond, and, also, a chopping mill. A man has a mill about one and a half miles down the stream, and he says that he can stop me from building the pond and the mill, and that he controls the stream for so many miles above the pond. Does he control it any further than his own property, and can he stop me from building? OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—It is impossible for us to tell from the foregoing statement of facts alone. You should consult a solicitor personally, as there are many things to be taken into account in determining the mill-owners' rights in the premises, and the fullest statement of case possible is necessary in order to your being properly advised in the matter.

PLANNING PIGPEN.

I have a building, 20 feet by 24 feet, which I wish to use for a pigpen. It is 6 feet at eaves.

1. What height of wall would I have to put under it to make it a proper height for pigs?
2. Would it be better to loft it over at plates, or leave it open to roof?
3. How high should sleeping berths be from floor?
4. Would it require two or three windows on each side?
5. What do you think would be best plan of ventilation?
6. Would putting 6 or 8 inches of gravel under cement floor be sufficient drainage?
7. How much cement would be required for walls and floor? How would I mix it?
8. How thick should wall be?

R. A. M.

Ans.—1. Two feet of wall, so that eaves can be eight feet high would do very well.

2. Loft it over.

3. First-class sleeping berths can be made by the use of plank floor, raised four inches clear above cement. If you refer to elevated berths, three feet is sufficiently high.

4. Two windows on each side would be very good, though three would be better.

5. We have been recommending a flue from ceiling to ventilator in roof as the best all-round system. One of our prominent Ontario breeders favors a straw-covered loft, the boards of the loft being laid a few inches apart. The straw, he says, will absorb all moisture, and also allow sufficient ventilation.

6. Not unless there is a good outlet for soilage that might get into gravel. If ground is tile-drained, or if it falls away on all sides from floor, gravel underneath is not necessary.

7. About 9 barrels altogether. Mix, for walls and first three inches of floor, one part cement to nine of gravel. For half-inch surface of floor, mix one of cement to two of fine sand. Mix dry; add water after.

8. Eight inches would be quite thick enough.

Dyspepsia, Boils, Pimples, Headaches, Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, and all troubles arising from the Stomach, Liver, Bowels or Blood.

Mrs. A. Lethbridge, of Ballyduff, Ont., writes: "I believe I would have been in my grave long ago had it not been for Burdock Blood Bitters. I was run down to such an extent that I could scarcely move about the house. I was subject to severe headaches, backaches and dizziness; my appetite was gone and I was unable to do my housework. After using two bottles of B. B. B. I found my health fully restored. I warmly recommend it to all tired and worn out women."
