LONDON, CANADA Phone 170

Published by permission of Burns, Oates &e Washbourne, London, England.

HONOUR WITHOUT RENOWN

BY MES. INNES BROWN

Author of "Three Daughters of the United

CHAPTER X

"Sir Henry had been from home for a few days, but returning sudden ly, learned with horror from his servants of the serious illness of his Waiting for neither rest nor refreshment, he summoned his favourite dog, a black retriever, and struck bastily across the park in a direct line for the Manor House. At the ancient ruins he paused impatiently to ascertain the cause of the dog's sudden bark of recognition. Looking through a broken arch, he beheld a scene that henceforth he never forgot. For half a minute he should like to know?" stood as one petrified, powerless to ivy, lighted by the rays of the setting Was that wasted form indeed Near that of his younger brother? him, on the grass, lay what? Sir Henry started. A little roll of white clothes, from the midst of which appeared a tiny head, bare of any covering save the silken golden expression in his voice continued :

Down! Bosco, down!' And at shadow started. Overcome with delight at the welcome vision of his elder brother, poor Edmund stretched have dreamed of." forth his hands, exclaiming :

Oh Harry, dear Harry, I knew you would come! Take care of my boy for me.' But the sudden relief and joy were too much for him; bounding forward, the elder man just in time to catch his continued: brother as he fell forward in a heavy

Supporting the poor weak frame from his pocket an envelope, and for assistance, called the dog and elapsed ere, almost breathless, the claim whatever upon her son. coachman and stable boy arrived. said eternly :

Take the child and carry is carefully to the Hall, and give it at once into Mrs. Turner's charge."

"With soiled and trembling hands the boy stooped and raised the sleeping mite, almost letting it drop in his extreme pervousness: he had never before seen his master so disturbed. Sir Henry walched his exit from the ruins; then, without another word, he motioned the coschman to raise his brother's feet, will never need him, and must never have him. You will bring him up to be a good man like yourself! teach him to love his father's memory. God bless you, Harry!' So he died.'

Marguerite once more! and even Manfred's voice shook as he said:

quite so distinctly?"

sad funeral of his brother every one knew that from henceforth, to be friends with Sir Henry they must be good to Edmund's boy. It seemed as Harold could not endure the sight of though the guardian uncle was his handsome, cheery half brother. "We registering a vow, for ere the remains Nor could I blame him!" declared Dollyof the parent had been lowered into Manfred with vehemence. "It was their last resting place, he knelt hard indeed that by a freak of Nature some moments; then, after fondly agree with me, Sister?"
kissing the tiny brow, gently restored "Did it never strike Harold," was took no heed of her remark but con-

"Sir Henry, having taken upon himself the guardianship of the boy, Edmund's widow let her house and left the neighbourhood. Then, of course, she married Manly; and before a year had passed another son It has taken a great deal of telling, but this is how there came to be so little difference in age between the two half brothers."

"I understand it better now. What was the name of this new baby little Edmund's half brother? Let me see," he said in a slow besitating tone of voice.

"Suppose we call it Harold?"
observed Sister Marguerite quietly.

"Harold!" he exclaimed excitedly raising his body on his elbows and straining his neck to catch a glimpse of her face. "Why call is Harold, I

'Oh"-gravely and slowly-" it is advance. What was the meaning of the picture, framed in the broken to come uppermost in my mind at the picture, framed in the broken arch, balf covered with lichen and the moment." As she spoke she arch, balf covered with lichen and the moment." As she spoke she have lighted by the rays of the setting held her work at arm's length, as though deeply engrossed in keen criticism of it.

He watched her as closely as his position allowed for a few more seconds, then sank back upon his pillows, and with a half satisfied

Well, Harold let it be then, since you seem to like the name so much. the sound of Sir Henry's voice the But it is all in keeping with the rest shadow started. Overcome with of your strange notions to fix upon a of your strange notions to fix upon a name which no one else would ever

> In her place of vantage Sister Marguerite felt she could now indulge in tears or grim faces as the mood should suit her. At this moment she looked very knowing, but wisely held her peace. He

Of the early years of Harold's life I know little or nothing, but believe that they were spent abroad. Howwith one arm, the stronger mandrew ever, when he was about six years old his father disd; and the grief of scribbling hastily upon it an appeal his mother at the loss of her husband was as sincere and deep as had been bade him carry it back to the Abbey her love of him. Almost broken-Towers. Bosco, seeming fully to hearted, and with but small means take in the sad situation, needed no of existence, Mrs. Manly returned, a two. second bidding, but scampered off, widow for the second time, to the note between his teeth. Then old Manor House. From Sir Henry Sir Henry, with a sorrowful counten she received but a cold welcome, and ance, still supporting his brother's strict orders upon no condition to helpless form, set his teeth and interfere with young Edmund. She had chosen, he said, to desert the The dog performed his errand boy and his father in their hour of faithfully. Scarcely five minutes had need, and henceforth she had no did not seek to vindicate herself, and Addressing the latter, the baronet appeared to take no interest in any devotion that a nature like here was capable of bestowing. I shall not linger unnecessarily over incidents that are of no very special conse-

"It was pretty hard, I can assure you, for Harold as he grew up and began to realize more fully how matters stood, to see his half brother and placing his own arms firmly and treated as a young prince, to know hide in the dark background? tenderly under poor Edmund's also that he would inherit the old shoulders, bore him back to the old home of his boyhood, even to the whilst his own portion would consist morrow," he pleaded, "and sit near very room that bad always been his of the Manor Farm alone. which, by own; and there, with the tenderness the way, was mortgaged to the hilt. my story. An evil influence seems of a mother the elder man watched It seemed unfair—for Edmund was to overpower me when you are not and nursed his brother till he died." richly endowed by nature also, as near. Why did you hide?" She Yes, he was half delirious when times are. He was handsome and with marvellous skill and patience, talentied. With study and diligence and did not leave until peace and he could have made a living by his calm reigned once more within him. all this time?" brush; besides which he had a "Shusup in her private chamber, splendid voice, and a very good ear rocking hersels to and fro, over for music. No doubt he had the whelmed in such grief that it was best of masters that money could feared her reason would succumb. procure, and every advantage was But do not call her heartless; she his; but he did not seem to value was not that, nor did her husband his position and gifts as he should reproach her. Almost his last words have done; at least, had Harold were: 'Don't blame her, Harry, she | changed places with him, I dare say only made a mistake. But to your he would have appreciated them sole charge I leave my boy. She better. The two boys became friendly. Edmund, you see, could sfford due, he always did his best to make d bless you, Harry!' So he died.'' Harold's life happy. But under such Poor man!' ejaculated Sister unequal circumstances—one boy possessing all things, the other only that which was doled out to him by "If I am to continue, will you his more fortunate brother—it was kindly remove your seat to some but natural that Harold should grow place where I cannot see your face up dissatisfied and jealous. Scarcely a day passed but he sought relief Willingly," she replied, smiling from his mother's sympathetic heart, said, with an odd catch in his deep to herself; for was it not at his own pouring into her cars the insults voice.

particular request that she was and wrongs he had to endure from "Ye seated where she was? It was with Edmund; making her the recipient before pleasure then that she withdrew her of all his griefs, real and imaginary. chair from its prominent position, Being comparatively but poorly and placing it out of sight at the she could only hold out hopes to her head of his bed, seated herself and darling which to him seemed improbresumed her work in silence. able and unreal. Year by year he "The services of the old family grew more gloomy and discontented, nurse were called once more into until envy and jealousy took such a requisition, and after the quiet but deep root in his mind that they

the little fellow to his nurse. Are the quist rejoiner, "that the very trained to think."
you listening, Sister?" that the very trained to think." you listening, Sister?"

"I am, indeed. Sir Henry, as you call him, was a good man. I suppose he had another name? Could the widow not afford one tear for her husband's grave?"

house in which he lived belonged by hereditary right to Edmund also? Really, I cannot see how any one of the could blame the boy, if his uncle widow not afford one tear for her husband's grave?"

house in which he lived belonged by "Then, why didn't she train it?" asked Dr. Grafton, a faint smile flick-ering over his face as he realized how very correct was Sister Angela's diagnosis.

"She twind" approach to think."

"Then, why didn't she train it?" asked Dr. Grafton, a faint smile flick-ering over his face as he realized diagnosis.

be observed by her patient. Manfred none."
Still, one could hardly blame him

thus winning at the same time the respect of Sir Henry and my half-brother, who doubtless would have in the future.

only distastsful, but derogatory.

whilst a pair of arched eyebrows little coquette's feet. rose significantly, and two little lips

"Pray were the brothers at all know you will believe and hope as man's love—and lost it.

Manly admire her elder son?"

"I don't promise," answered Dolly,

'No, she did not. She was true to Harold, and the memory of his father. Day by day mother and son discussed the unsatisfactory state of affairs, until they persuaded themselves that there was a gross injustice somewhere, and that it Sir Henry did not equalize matters of his own accord, well, then pressure of some sort should be brought to bear upon him. Cost what it might, Harold should have his share, and the longer he waited for it the greater should be his portion." little corner, but no remark.

You asked if they resembled each demurely. other in appearance; yes, in features Edmund was taller, of more muscular puppet and a plaything with the build; his eyes were the same dark blue as his father's. Of course he was always well dressed, and being looked upon as the heir, folks said he was much the handsomer of the 'No, he didn't. And as Manfred gnashed out the words, he glared like a wild animal, whilst his hands were so tightly clenched that the sharp nails pierced the delicate skin expression was lost upon the enough when you tell twenty man observant listener; but fearing the the same pretty lie. Listen, Dolly!

must not talk any more now. be my wife, or alse--." He paused Tomorrow you may continue your as if he could not fluish the sentence. quence, but simply state the essential Large beads of perspiration stood upon his brow, but at her gentle touch his features relaxed. Seizing both her hards he exclaimed: "Don't go, Sister. Don't leave me yet! I do not feel myself. Oh, why did you me-close beside me-whilst I finish such favourities of fortune some- fed him, soothed and quieted him

THE BRIER ROSE

TO BE CONTINUED

A light breeze stirred the white nuslin curtains. The breath of the budding roses came into the quaint old parlor, where the high-nosed Paytons of four generations frowned down from the wainscoted walls to patronize; he could also afford to upon Angus Grafton, leaning against be generous; and to give to him his the tall mantel shelf, his strong, grave face pathetic in its tenderness, its perplexity, pain.

For Dolly, pretty brown eyed Dolly, whose tip-tilted nose defled all the traditions of her race, was standing before him in one of those mutinous feminine moods that defy masculine

It is for the last time, Dolly," he

You have said that three times before," answered Dolly, mischiev-

'I know it," he continued, and his she could only hold out hopes to her darling which to him seemed improbable and unreal. Year by year he past six months. But I have determined to take my folly in hand, and and-master it.' There was a ring in the words that an older and wiser woman would have heard and heeded. But naughty Dolly only flipped a rose-leaf from

We must understand each other,

'Oh, we couldn's," she answered, quite decisively. "At least I couldn't, I know. Understanding things beside the coffin, and taking the one should have everything and the 1 know. Understanding things baby in his arms, prayed silently for other next to nothing! Don't you always made my head ache, even at school. Sister Angela said it was because my mind had never been grimace, which, however, could not all the luck. Poor Harold had Uncle Dick only left me at the conwould turn Catholic if he kept me for being fortunate. Was he not there any longer. And perhaps kind to Harold?" there was a curious softening of d to Harold?" there was a curious softening of the Kind? Yes, that was the worst roguish face—"I might. I used to of it; he shared everything with him at in the chapel in the evening and as far as he dared; but Sir Henry did listen to the nuns singing in the not like the younger boy, and he had choir. and think—and think—O too much pride and spirit to beg dear!" said Dolly, dimpling into her from either of them!" naughty self again. "I often wish I from either of them!"

"Well," said Sister Marguerite, nodding her head emphatically.

"Had I been Harold, I should have to bother about hats and gowns." cap like Sister Angela's, and no need

"Had I been Harold, I should have made up my mind to face the situation manfully; and in order to make the best of things, should have the best of things, about have and outright. The picture of the picture as he laughed, he realized that Sister Angela's efforts had not altogether failed. There had always been an dmired my spirit and assisted me indefinable charm about Aunt Betty's brier rose that had told of an uplift "Which proves how little you can ing touch. He had been confathom the feelings of a gentleman scious of a better, truer nature like Harold, to whom work was not under Dolly's most tormenting moods. It this intangible The words were spoken hastly, elusive spell that had held him cap-and in an injured tone of voice; tive for the last six months at the tive for the last six months at the

'You could never be a nun, Dolly,' smiled an amused and superior he said softly. "But-but-some that none might see that she had day, when you are all my own, I played too recklessly with a strong > with a wilful shake of her curls. don't promise anything."

> "You forget," he said gravely."

There is one thing you have prom-

"No." persisted Dolly, like the naughty little brier rose she was. have not promised anything. I to you that I cared for you, and I do. always like people that like me, and I tell them so, because I don't want to hurt their feelings."

And-and'-the speaker's greater should be his portion." had grown white—" you mean you There was a smothered sigh from the tell all men the same thing?" 'Oh, no! Not all," answered Dolly,

And you wish me to understand there was a strong likeness. But that you have made me simply a

> I never said anything like that, I am sure," replied Dolly, in a much aggrieved tone. "I've told you twenty times I liked you." Liked me, Dolly Well, loved you, then," corrected Dolly, in the softest of little whispers. And you said that was enough. But there was no answering smile in the grave, stern face to which she lifted her bewitching eyes. kin.

Neither the gesture nor the answered, in a new, hard voice, "not second marriage. Upon him she concentrated all the passionate devotion that a natural library voices in the little parlour. You truth and earnestness that you will

> "Or else what?" asked Dolly, holding up her pretty head deflantly at 'Else there must be an end to this maddening mockery. I shall leave you forever, Dolly,' A cold chill like a frost breath went through the heart of the little brier rose; then she put out all her pretty prickles to hide the shiver and the pang.

"Ah, well! I'll try to bear it," she with a light little laugh. Good-bye, Dr. Grafton."

"Good bye," beanswered, taking the hand she held out to him and nearly crushing it for a moment in his own.

pain and dismay under the simpering brier rose! Ab, he was dreaming portrait of another Miss Dorothy death dreams, he thought, opening no longer considered authentic. Peyton, who had played as recklesely his heavy eyes wearlly. with men's hearts and hopes one last, shaking her pretty, pink tipped grance. Roses, brier roses, thriving fingers. "He fairly crushed my hand he looked." Then she dimpted into tied! And into the hollow, burning requish smiles again. "He will be eyes that gazed upon the flowers roguish smiles again. at the ball tonight, I know, just the there welled two great tears that same." And the little witch, sure of told how weak the strong, proud her spell, tripped gaily upstairs to put freeh ribbons in the white gauze "O look, Au best of all her dainty fripperies. evening, her golden curls perked up in a jaunty coronet on her graceful ead, her fluttering fan a sceptre whose sway none dared dispute. Never had she flashed and sparkled and dimpled more bewitchingly upon her train of admirers, who were ready to fight for a smile, a word, a

But there was one who did not come; one whom her slightest whis-per had hitherto lured from book, lesk, fireside, from all but the path of duty, to follow her dancing feet. And as the merry hours sped on, and still that strong, grave face failed to lock upon her triumph, Dolly became deadly weary of it all, and felt that shadow of death seemed to vanish hatred that mankind is pauperized Dr. Herbert was the only sensible man in the room, when at the stroke of twelve he stopped beside her to say "good night.

"Awfully sorry I have to leave so soon, Miss Dolly, but I must be on midnight darkness without. "You mean that—he—has—gone!" panted Dolly, clutching her dainty happy little bride.-Mary T. Waggalittle fan as if it could uphold her in a dissolving universe. Gone? Why, yes-surely he said good-bye to you? doctor looked at her curiously Ob, yes; of course," answered Dally, feeling that all her world was gazing at her through those wondering eyes, and, rising to the situation only the born coquette can, was going quite so soon. your waltz, I believe, Mr. Lawson, and Dolly bent a bewitching smile on the newcomer at her side, you mind sitting it out in the conservatory? And if you will get me one of those lovely little pink ices downstairs, I will hide away under that big cleander and wait for it.' And while Jack Lawson went for the pink ice Dolly got the five minutes to herself that she needed to steady her heart and brain and nerves.

brassy sun was scorching the little southern seaport, whose tropic languor had been galvanized into unwonted life by the battle thrill quivering through the land. The white sands were alive with moving troops, wagons, hospital attendants. Transports laden with the wounded and dying, were unloading their ghastly freight at the narrow wharves; doctors and nurses were hurrying from all parts of the union to help and to save those who had been stricken down.

In the long stretch of barracks that had been hastily transformed into a hospital lay Angus Grafton, frembling between life and death. Shattered with shot, wasted with fever, he was but a shadow of the stalwart man whose heroic service was on the lips of every soldier in his regiment.

But no echo of his grateful praise could reach the doctor's ear now. For more than five weeks he had lain in a dull stupor, broken only by faint gleams of consciousness, during which he had seemed wearily indifferent to life or death.

He has a chance still," said the keen eyed old surgeon, who watched with especial interest over his brave young confrere, "a fighting chance still. But he must be roused to make the fight. It would be well to send for some of his people—mother, wife, sister, sweetheart — anybody very near and dear to him. This is no place for visitors, I know, but we must save a fine fellow like Grafton

And the clear-eyed Sister who, with many others, had been sum-moned from other fields of duty to hospital service looked through the pockets of the tattered blood stained uniform for some letter or paper to guide her. She found no word, no ine, only the surgeon's notebook, a little Vade Mecum, and a velvet case from which laughed a fair, sweet, references to him. roguish face that Sister Angelaknew.

Drifting through troubled dreams, clouded by dimly remembered horrors of blood and carnage, Angus Grafton became suddenly aware of a faint breath of perfume that seemed Good-bye, and God forgive you, to hold captive his wandering spirit. The dulled brain What was it?

Groping, like one almost blind, for his bat and cane, he turned from the room, leaving Dolly breathless with ing pain. A rose! the breath of a

No. There upon the little table at in him a very narrow minded, self-his side stood a great white bowl, centred demagague, who took advan-"The horrid man!" gasped Dolly at fairly brimming with bloom and fragrance. Roses, brier roses, thriving and-and-how white and queer blossoms that would not be bound or

O look, Aunt Betty, look! He gown which Angus Grafton liked the sees, he knows! Oh, I can't weil best of all her dainty fripperies. And a very fairy queen she looked to him," and a little white robed as she floated through the dance that figure fluttered out from the screen to him," and a little white robed dence rather than anything else ing curtain bebind the cot—and who maintain that on the whole the Dolly!—was it Dolly or some mock so-called Reformation has resulted in ing phantom of her shape? She was down on her kness beside his pillow, holding his wasted hands, sobbing out between smiles and tears : Angue, dear Angue, it is I-I-your own Dolly-your little brier rose Sister Appela sent me word that you ing in the world for a league or needed me—and—I came with Aunt association of nations. This issurely Don't leave me again, Angus; don't | Christendom, leave me again.' and the light of life kindled the pale, by debts incurred by past conflicts wasted face.

whisper through the parched lips. "My Dolly-never again."

and now for double work."

"Double work!" echoed Dolly, fessional records, and there was a cord is even more serious than was get well in a way that broke all pro- modern industrialism. Internal dis vaguely.

"Yes; of course you know Grafton leaves tonight. Foolish thing for a crations of high nosed Peytons had the Church in some countries, and the Church in some countries, and tive as it tore its way through the bave it so in spite of all fashion's protests—they crowned with their winsome, blushing blossoms the man, in Benziger's.

CONSPIRACY AGAINST HISTORY

Reminders are being printed in the daily papers that it is 400 years since Martin Luther nailed his famous theses to the church door. It must be admitted that this announcement was made without much enthusiasm. It was interesting to observe the reasons that were offered for celebrating the anniversary of the event. No one suggested, for instance, that Luther was a particularly good man The halo that used to surround his memory has long since departed. No one suggested that he was a particu larly religious man. It is difficult nowadays to find any evidences of isty in the world that can be traced o his influence. No one would think placing him beside the Catholic reformers, St. Francis de Sales and St. Ignatius Loyola, as a model of Christian virtues. We all know by this time that he was a coarse, vulgar fellow, who deliberately chose low deals of life. It is quite unneces sary to prove that there were any own writings show that he insolent y sneered at holiness of life, and that if some believed him to be a they took him at his own estimate.

In trying to show that his name is half hearted attempt is made to prove that he was at least a man of great moral courage, whose deflance sulted in the emancipation of mankind from religious tyranny. This is about the only tribute that any one can dare to pay to his memory at the present time.

It would not be hard to prove that this estimation of his place in his tory is arrived at by arguing backwards from a survey of modern con-ditions. We find the world tolerant of all religious beliefe, except, perhaps, Catholicism. It is supposed that this condition of tolerance is due to Protestantism. And it therefore argued that Luther the apostle of toleration. Nothing could really be further from the truth. Modern tolerance is not due Protestantism, but rather to the indifference to all religion that Proestantism has bred. No genuine Protestant was ever tolerant. vary name itself bristles with intolerance. That people have ceased to be sufficiently interested in religion to persecute one another, is certainly a pected or desired. Luther would be nost astonished did he realize that nodern unbelievers claimed him for

The theory that Luther was the onscious author of any kind of religious or civic liberty is quite modern. It is not, however, quite modern enough to be fashionable. Perhaps this is why the newspapers were somewhat apologetic in their sects have practically abandoned him, together with Henry VIII., Cranmer, John Calvin and Zwingli. The Lutherans who bear his name are the only ones who have the courage to speak of him. And they are hard pressed. A long array of German non Catholic names could be quoted who have long since demol-ished the Luther myth. Even the famous words that he is supposed to have uttered at the Diet of Worms, "Here I stand. I cannot do other-wise. So help me God. Amen," are latest estimate of his character see tage of the trend of popular feeling to throw off a discipline that had b come irksome. His break with the Church was the occasion rather than the cause of the so-called Reforma tion. His apostasy produced a situation in which long existing tenden cies manifested their presence open ly. Garmany was ripe for a rebellion against the Catholic Church. Tha the strife centred around the burly figure of Luther was due to coinci

There are, however, still people good. It will not be difficult to show that this is a sort of superstition which is quite out of keeping with popular tendencies. Let us take the case of internationalism. It cannot be denied that there is much yearn-Betty this morning. Oh, won't you the undoing of the work of the try to-to live-for me, Argus? I Reformation. The Lutherau rebelhave loved you all the time. I have lion was the beginning of that destruc-cried every night since you left me. tion of the unity of races known as It introduced extreme form of nationalism that has and burdened by taxes to prepare fo Again let us take the case of social

My Dolly—never again."

And then Dr. Gratton proceeded to fierce battle is being waged against widow not allord one tear for her husband's grave?"

"Why should you be so hard upon her?" he inquired testily. "She preceded for her first husband?"

"But recovered sufficiently to marry again, did she?" and Sister Marguerite made a significant was to want for anything! He had was no use. Aunt Betty had let to work the front stirred all the laws of Lin-manus to work was to want for anything was no use. Aunt Betty had let work was to want betty had let was no use. Aunt Betty had let work was to want betty had let was no use. Aunt weakened it in others. goes his train now!" And over the occasion. They garlanded the rooms, classes in complete control of every-sweet strains of the Strauss waltz they decked the table, they wreathed rose the shrill shrick of the locomothe cake, and—Dr. Grafton would world were able not only to reduce

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS MURPHY & GUNN BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES

Solicitors for The Home Bank of Canada

FOY, KNOX & MONAHAN BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES, ETC Telephones { Main 461 Main 462 Offices: Continental Life Building CORNER BAY AND RICHMOND STREETS

DAY, FERGUSON & CO. nes E. Day
D. M. Form

un M. Ferguson eph P. Waish

26 Adelaide St. West LUNNEY & LANNAN BARRISTERS, SÓLICITORS, NOTARIES Harry W. Lunney, B. A., B. C. L. Alphonsus Lannan, LL. B. CALGARY, ALBERTA

JOHN H. MCELDERRY BARRISTER, SOLICITOR NOTARY PUBLIC

CONVEYANCER to Loan Telephone 1081 HERALD BLDG. ROOM 24 GUELPH, ONT.

ARCHITECTS WATT & BLACKWELL Members Ontario Association ARCHITECTS Sixth Floor, Bank of Toronto Chambers LONDON, ONT.

DR. BRUCE E. EAID Room 5, Dominion Bank Chambers ichmond and Dundas Sts. Phone 5660

Boys and Girls Enjoy Bookkeeping as it is Taught in Hornet School

Nearly every student is taking part or all of the Bookkeeping Course, and they find it pays. W. F. MARSHALL, Principal, London, Ont. St. Jerome's College

Founded 1864 KITCHENER, ONT.

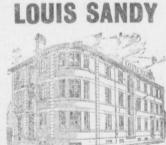

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

John Ferguson & Sons

180 KING ST. Telephone House 373 Factory 543

CANAGO MAGANISTA MAGANISTA ESCADA CONTRACTOR DE CANAGO DE CANAGO DE CANAGO DE CANAGO DE CANAGO DE CANAGO DE CA TO BE AN OTHER PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE E. C. Killingsworth FUNERAL DIRECTOR Open Day and Night

389 Burwell St. Phone 3971

GORDON MILLS

Habit Materials and Veilings SPECIALLY PRODUCED FOR THE USE OF

RELIGIOUS COMMUNITIES

BLACK, WHITE, AND COLOURED SERGES and CLOTHS, VEILINGS CASHMERES, ETC.

d in a large variety of widths and qualities Samples forwarded on applicatio LOUIS SANDY Gordon Mills, STAFFORD, ENGLAND Telegrams - Luisandi, Stafford, 'Phone No. 164

In the Country of Jesus

By MATILDA SERAO A very charming account of travel and worship in the Holy Land by a writer of the first rank, recording the impressions of a devout and truly poetic mind.

Postpaid 900. Catholic Record LONDON, ONT.

87 YONGE ST., TORONTO Phone Main 4030

nennessey

DRUGS PERFUMES

Order by Phone - we Deliver CHURCH OUR FREE CATALOGUE
Write to Cincinnati Belt Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

CUT FLOWERS

CANDIES