From the Brookville R There are few men in Brockville o There are few men in Brockville or vicinity better known to the General public, and there is certainly no one held in greater esteem by his friends, than Mr. L. deCarle, sr. Mr. deCarle came from England to Canada forty-four years ago, locating in the county of Glengarry. Eight years later he ismoved to Brockyille and has made his home here ever since. He estab-lished the large marble business still carried on by his sons here, and is himself one of the most expert stone-cutter in the Dominion of Canada He is also well known as an artist in other lines jand as a draughtsman has the is also well known as an artist in other lines (and as a draughtsman has h few equals and no superiors. Canadian Pacine realroad was begun, Sir Sanford Flemming, chief engineer of that great trans-continental road requested him to join his staff. Mr. deCarle accepted the position at Sir Sanford's request and remained with Of the palace of the rich man the company for nine years, during which time he drew nearly all the profiles of the road and the plans of Or the poor man's quiet bome, dition as it was before the alteration took place. These experiments, remarkable in themselves, have implications that make them of peculiar interest to geologiss, mineralogists, and, incidentally, to sculp-tors, builders, contractors, and the world in general. For the geologist the interest in the proof of the plasticity of marble rests on the light the experiment throw on certain obscure formations of the earth's crust. They prove that under the conditions of pressure existing deep in the crust, stones may be mokled into new shapes without being meltod. The plant of fact, the molded marble of these experiments, when examined under the microscope, presents many striking resemblances to certain natural rocks whose poculiar cleavage has herestofore been difficult to explain. The recent dis-overy at McGill, however, shows that profiles of the road and the plans of the bridges between Ottawar and Thun-der Bay. His work was commended as the best done by any draughtsman in the company's employ. Since leav-ing the company's service Mr. deCarle has lived a retired life, enjoying a well earned competence at his cosy home in the west end of the town. The soundest rule for an anthology i soundess rule is an anot that ebserved by Mr. when he anthologized was dividing with Take all you can get of no doubt that enserved by Mr. Johanhai Wild when he anthologised from the booty he was dividing with Mr. Blue-dtin, 'Take all you bag get of the best.' Unfortunately the late Mr. Palgraws has carried out this rule so effectually in the first series (nos in the second, we fear) of his 'Goldan Treasury' shat ne self-respec-ing anthologist on adopt it any more. If originality in selection is to be evined, some new principle must be discovered. Mrs. Meynell and Mr. Henley are equal to the eccession. Mrs. Meynell's orienton is 'the flower of the mind, 'a cortain dainty erquisiteness characteristic of the wary highest work'. Mr. Henley's, the measure of true tyrical spirit. This has the advantage of be-ing the easter of ap-plication a n d of yielding a more am-ple harvest. It also protext the antholo-gist from consure, from the Mr. Blue-owes an account to her readers for omit-ting 'The Elegy,' and seems unable to render any other than that two lines de ting 'The Elegy', and seems unable to render any other than that two lines de not compare well with two of Shake-speare's on a kindred theme. This really will not do; the chair of 'The Elegy' does not reside in single lines, though even these are uncommonly projects stones in a mosaic, but in the total impression of the piece. The fact is, we fear, that Mrs. Meynell is deficient in that cardinal virtue of the antholegist, catholicity, and has a difficulty in admitting that the human mind put forth any flowers in the eighteenth century, whence, excepting from Blake and Burns, who might have belonged to any age, ale has borrowed only four poems. On the other hand, she is strong in the sixteenth and early sov-enteenth centuries. Her selection from Shakespeare's sonsts is excellent, and it is a delightful surprise to find so beauti-ful a poem as that which she has discov ered in Thomas Randolph. One conse-quence of Mrs. Meynell's plan is to en-courage most the poets who have in her sonse 'flowered' most liberally; hence the contributions of Milton, Wordsworth, Shelley and Keets are exceptionally nu-merous. Of this one cannot complain, but in some other instances Mrs. Meynell might, with advantage to the poets them-solves, have exercised stricter discrimina-tion. Harripeton Finesch en the Tomestic. Her Majesty's Dead Domestic. Queen Victoria has paid a touching withute to her old servant. The Queen has placed on the grave of the late Mrs. McDonald, in Crathis churchyard, a tombatione consisting of two handsome blocks of red Peterhead granite, on the top of which is carved an interlaced Cel-tic cross. The following inscription is out in raised polished letters: "This stone is placed by Queen Victoria in grateful and affectionate remembrance of Annie McDonald, daughter of William Mitchell of Clachanturn and widow of John McDonald. She was in the Queen's service for forty one years, and during thirty-one years was wardrobe maid and the faithful servant and devoted friend to the Queen, by whom her loss is deeply deplored. terpiece of pathos, THE LATE F. T. PAI-ORAVE. The Childless Fa-ther,'s clouds seen in anthologies. "The second sories of the late Mr. F. T. Palgrave's (Golden Trassury 'is a book for which we may well be thankful, abounding as it does with evidences of oharming taste, but which is still very far from attaining the level of the first sories. The ninetcenth century, of course, is un-sple to compete with all the proceding conturies put together, but Mr. Palgrave has by no means made the most of the material he had. It is not his fault if he has been occasionally thwared by the churlishness of authors and publishers, but his insertions are sometimes as un-accountable as his omissions. The extravchurlishness of authors and publishors, but his insertions are sometimes as un-accountable as his omissions. The extrav-agant space allotted to Arbiur O'Shaugh-nessy has been much and properly com-mentedfupon. O'Shaughnessy was a born singer who most justly deserved a goner-ous recognition, but is here made almost ridiculous by disproportion, 'killed with kindness.' It was also a fatal error to have given anything from living writers. Mr. Frederick Tennyson. for instance, is no veryday post, but no reason can be adduced for including him which would not be equally efficacious in the case of a dozen others. The omissions upon Mr. Palgrave's liss have been so severely crit-leized that it is almost needless to say more of Ehmin. We only name the amas-ing one of Emily Bronte, whose swan song sweeps with unfaltering pinion through the region of the sublime. THE EXCITABLE FRENCH.

THE EXCITABLE FRENCH. Some is the Chamber of Deputies With the Members Enrage! Upon arriving at the antercom of the chamber of deputies, says Colonel T. W. Higginson in The Atlantic, I found the hall full of people waiting, each having to send his card to some mem-ber, naming on it the procise hour of arrival. The member usually appeared grompily, when an immense unher call-ed in a stentorian voice for 'La per-sonne qui a fait demander M. Constants'' —or whoever it might be. Then the oonstituent—for such it usually was-advanced toward the smilling member, who never looked bored, the mask of boopitality being probably the same in this respect throughout the legislative halls of the world. At last M. Talan-dir appeared and got me spince among halls of the world. As the fait and disr appeared and gos me a place among the corps diplomatique. The chamber-itself was more like our representatives' hall at Washington than like the house of commons, The members had little locked desks, and some were writing lotters like one accementatives though letters, like our representatives, though letters, like our rescreeentatives, though I saw no newspapers. The ordinary an ount of noise was like that in our congress, though there was happily no clapping of hands for pages, but when the members became especially excited, which indeed hap-pened very often, it became like a cage of lions. For instance, I externed just as somebody had questioned the minister of war, General Borel, about an alleged interference with alcottons, and his de-

Value of Woolen Mille' Waste. The waste liquids from Woolen mills threatened, like Tennyson's "brock," to "yun on forever," till science came to the rescue. The recovered product called "magma" is caught in canvas bags and subjected to hydraulic pressure. It yields an oil, which, when distilled, is a com-bination of cloth oil (used in wool and jute spinning and in soap-making) and stearin, from which candles are made. There is also a black refuse, valuable as a fartilizer; a hard pitch, unequalled as a lubricator in iron rolling mills, and a light spirit oil, used to dissolve rubber.
