THE GALTON WHISTLE.

In the sense of heaing numerous problems have interested the experimental lems have interested the experimental psychologist. Among these may be mention the range of sounds that can be heard by an individual—that is, the limit both above and below which no sound can be heard. The solution of these two problems, the determination of the upper and lower limit of sound, has occasioned a great deal of careful work and the construction of many forms of apparatus. For determining the upper limit of sound for any individual—and individuals differ considervidual—and individuals differ considerably—the Galton whistle is generally used. It consists of a tiny pipe, which is lengthened or shortened by a piston adjustment by a migroupate sore. This adjustment by a micrometer screw. This little instrument can be regulated to make a tone which is too high for any human car to hear, and which will finally produce only a painful sensation.

He had one of the whistles built into the end of his cane. and as he walked through the zoological gardens he would blow it near the ears of the various animals. He adjusted the whistle too high for his own ear the whistle too high for his own ea to hear, and if the various animals re sponded to the sound, he knew that their upper limit was greater than that of the human ear. The ordinary hu-man ear can detect a tone whose vibra-tion rate is at least 25,000 vibrations second, while the whistle will produce 50,000 per second. This upper limit varies with the age of the individual to such an extent that, if the upper limit at 176 years of age were 50,000 vibrations, at 60 years of age it would be about 25,000 per second. -Strand

PACKING OF FRUITS

Government Issues a Pamphlet on Recent Changes.

Canadian fruits, than which there are one better, are now regarded in the markets of the world at their true worth. Through the operations of the Inspection and Sale Act, the packing of Canadian fruit has been greatly improved and the development of the trade accelerated. From time to time since its enactment, as experience has indicated, the Act has been improved, in order to more completely encourage and protect the industry. The latest amendment to the Act, which as passed during the past session of Parliament, extends inspection to imported fruit, thereby placing it on equal footing with that grown in Canada. The amendment provides that the Governor-in-Council by regulation may prescribe the kinds of imported fruit, the packages containing which must be branded or marked; the brands or marks to be used thereon, as well as the methods and places where such branding shall be done. Other minor changes were effected in the Act. From time to time since its enactment, pension of ship building be agreed upon to reduce the esst of armaments is likely to run into one or two difficulties. If the German haval programme be intended, as Germany insists, merely to provide a navy adequate for the needs of that nation, the answer to the British first lord of the admirality would be that there could be no suspension until the requirements of the German service had been met.

If Germany is building against Great Britain, as the British believe, the Churchill suggestion might offer an additional reason for increased German activity. Behind, the proposals of the first lord there is the intimation that Great Britain is wearying in the neavor to build two for one. Therefore, Germany might take the suggestion as indications of weakness and push alread.

If the German empire is building quite regardless of other nations for its own purpose, it is not likely to consider its plans a proper subject for international agreement: if it is building deliberately against Great Britain, it is even less likely to consent to a suspension even for a year.

HUNDRED YEARS OF PEACE.

(Montreal Teleghaph)
We should be hypocritical, as well as unreateful to their memory, if we pretend that our zeal for peace and our friendship for our neighbors upon this continent rendered us forgetful of the sacrifices of those who cemented the foundations of our creat Loungion with continent rendered us forgetful of the sacrifices of those who cemented the foundations of our great Dorninien with their toil and blood. But we have something else to be proud of, and in this our American coursins have their honorable share. That is that or almost a hundred years now no sword has been drawn no gun fired by one nation against the other. For more than three thousand eight hundred miles a common frontier runs practically unguarded as far as militar vistrenath is concerned. No navies threaten each other on our international inlands seas, which are as farge and as important as the Baltic, the Adriatic, the Black Sea and the Caspian. There have been as many and as serious mossible causes of war during that period between the British Empire and the United States as there chave been between any of the European nation. We have demonstrated the fact that high-spirited and energetic peenle can live alonevide each other, can develon their commerce under the keenest circumstances of competition, and yet can settle all their difficulties by arbit-vation.

Dogs in Alaska, when on the trail, are fed once a day, after the day's work is done. They are never fed in the morning, for if they were they would be lazy all for if they were they would be lazy all day, or, what is more probable, would won't up their breakfast soon after they got on the trail. Dogs, to work well, must be well fed, and it is false economy to underfeed a dog. They are fed on a variety of fools, including rice, tallow, corn meal and fish. If rice or cornneal forms a part of their food it must be cooked. Some men prefer to feed their dogs on bacon or fish, thus doing away with cooking, Cooked food doing away with cooking. Cooked food is cheaper and more fattening than raw feed, but the question as to whether dors can work better on cooked or uncooked food is one that will never be settled so long as there are "mushers" to argue the question.—Harper's Weekly. Not Always Available.

HATBITS OF THE 'COON.

Pretty Little Animal a Confirmed Nighthawk.

Were you ever at the Zoo at the nimals' meal time, about eight o'clock in the morn or two in the afterroon? There are many interesting things to be seen then, and one of the most interesting is to see the raccoons wash their food. Instead of washing their faces as cats do, they dip their food into the vater and rub it with their paws. Sometimes they get too lungry to take time for this washing, just as little boys and girls sometimes just as little boys and girls sometimes hurry to the table without washing their faces. Out in the woods the wild raccoons like to live near lakes or streams so they can dip their food in the water.

It would be interesting to know why the raceoons have this queer habit. It may be that because they get a good deal of their food from the water, such as clams, mussels, crayfish and oysters, they like to get into the habit of cating as if it all came from the same place. No doubt you have wished that "Bobby" Ceen would wake up when you are standing in front of his cage on the north side of the Zoo, so that you can get a better look at him. Yes, he seems to sleep most of the time. It is their natural habit to sleep in the is their natural habit to sleep in the daytime, and do their stirring about at night. But if you have seen them standing up, you have noticed that they look like a small bear. They are akin to the bear family. They are generally of a brown or grayish color, with black patches around their eyes. Their tails are ringed with black and grey. They have sharp claws and sharp teeth. They are very strong for their size, and they are very strong for their size, and they fight with great fierceness when in their wild state. Coons are found all over Canada and sport in it. Perhaps it is best not to let them become to numerous, for they eatch birds and break up their nests, getting the eggs. They are also very fend of corn when it is in milky grain, and occasionally they steal around to the farmer's henroost and get a chicken.

Something of an Athlete.

One of the party in a Washington club the other night referred to a wonderful stunt in athletics and then Congressman Alfred G. Allen, of Ohio, came across with a story about the prize athlete.

A short time ago two college boys called on a beautiful girl at her papa's cottage down by the restful sea. One of the boys was a friend of the family, but the other had not previously met the girl in question.

"Miss Smith," said the friend, filling the veranda full of profound bows, "permit me to introduce Mr. Jimson, of our track team. He has lifted 700 pounds, and jumped 23½ feet at a rivate trial.

"I am very pleased to meet you, Mr Jimson," sweetly remarked the fel-Jimson," sweetly remarked the fair one. And so you are in athletics? You make me think of a distant uncle of mine.

"Thanks!" responded the college boy, as his face blushingly suffused. "You quite flatter me. Was the uncle you speak of an athlete?"

"Well, I should say he was!" was the emphatic declaration of the girl. "He lifted $30,000 and jumped from here all way to South America!"-Ex

No amount of persuasion of punishment could keep Johnnie from running away. The excitement of being pursued and of being brought back to a tearful family appealed to his sense of the drumatic and offset the slight discomfort that sometimes followed. Finally his mother determined upon a

KEEP BABY HEALTHY

To keep the baby healthy his little stomach should be kept sweet and his bowels working regularly. Ninetenths of the maladies which afflict Coons are found all over Canada and the United States, and everywhere it is one of the greatest sports to hunt them. Once the writer helped chop a tree down to get a 'coon. He was there all right, and as soon as he came out of the hellow a little dog was on his back. He was a little 'coon, not quite as big as the dog, but more active, They kept fighting till they made their way to the bank of the creek and tumbled into the water. Then there was a tussle each trying to drown the other. It was about an even match till a big dog, which we were holding off, broke loos, and leaped in after the 'coon. With his strong laws he crippled the 'coon before we could make him drop it.

The fur of 'coons is valuable, but most of the reason for hanting them is the sport in it. Perhaps it is best not to let them become to numerous, for they are no young girls in America, asserts a French observer. Our girls,

History of Tea.

The earliest record of tea being mentioned by an Englishman was probably that contained in a letter from Mr. Wickham, an agent of the East India company, written from Firando, in Japan, on June 27, 1615, to another officer of the company, resident of Macao, in the south of China, asking him for "a pot of the best sort of chaw." It was not until the middle of that century that the English began to use tea; they received their supplies from Java until 1686, when they were driven out by the Dutch, says the Bulletin, of the Imperial Institute. At first the price in England ranged from £6 to £10 per pound. In the Mercurius Politicus of September, 1658, accurs an advertisement of the "China Drink called by the Chineaus Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tee," being sold in London. Thos. Garway, the first English tea dealer, in 1659 or 1660, offered it at prices varying from 15s to 50s a pound. Not until 1677 is there a record of the East India company having taken any steps for the importation. London Globe.
