ROTATION OF CROPS

The value of a systematic rotation of crops is well demonstrated at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, by three fields. Number 1 is under a rotation of crops; number 2 is sod that has received a top dressing of good barnyard manure once in five years; number 3 is a field left to its own salivation but previous to 1921 had been under a three-year rotation and in good state of fertility.

The average yield per acre covering the past four years is as follows: Field number 1, four-year rotation, averaged over 2.29 tons of excellent clover and timothy hay; field number 2, top-dressed once in five years, averaged 2.30 tons of fair timothy hay including fifteen per cent weeds; field number 3, no top dressing, averaged 1.95 tons poor timothy including twenty-five per cent daisies and weeds.

Placing the following fair values on the crop standing, number 1 field would be $8.00 per acre or an acre valuation of $18.32, number 2 field $6.00 per acre or an acre valuation of $16.80, number 3 field $5.00 per acre or an acre valuation of $9.75.

An average increase is shown during four years of $8.57 per acre per year in field number 1 over field number 3.

When it is considered that field number 3 was in good condition to start with in 1921, and shows an average loss of over $8.00 per acre in four years, what must our loss be from the large fields of hay land in this country that have been down to hay anywhere from five to fifteen years?

For after three years, half cent such acres as were marked, field number 1 should yield close to three tons of hay per acre; number 2 will barely run to two tons per acre; while number 3 will do well to cut one and one-half tons of very poor hay made up of at least thirty-five per cent daisies and brown top.

It would be a far better policy to turn out to pasture such acres as cannot be properly and economically cultivated.

W. W. Baird, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, N.S.

RECKLESS DRIVERS ALARM THE TOURISTS

That automobile drivers should adhere more strictly to the rules of the road, is the opinion freely expressed by visiting motorists from the United States, in a prominent Nova Scotian paper.

"You have curving roads in this country and it has been my experience that many of your drivers take turns in the roads at too high a rate of speed. The result is that impetus carries them beyond the middle of the roadway."

thus endangering not only their own safety but also the safety of an approaching car.

"On numerous occasions I have noticed drivers here cutting in ahead of cars in front while approaching the top of a hill or making turns in the roads. That is, of course, a most dangerous practice and motorists guilty of it should receive attention of the authorities. I should also like to allude to the fact that drivers in this country do not uniformly dim their lights. One should imagine that they would do so, at least for their own safety, because they must know that to blind an approaching driver is to render his car a menace. I believe that as you make Nova Scotia more widely known your tourist traffic will be correspondingly increased. That increase will be checked, however, should it become current, that visiting motorists are in danger from violations of the ordinary rules of the road."

The speaker orated fervently to his youthful audience: "He drove straight to his goal. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but pressed ever forward. Neither friend nor foe could delay him. All who crossed his path did so at their peril. What would you call such a man?"

"A truck driver," shouted a dozen hearers.
