the French Army.

Among the promotions in the French Army just announced by the Minister of War is one of peculiar interest, a man who entered the army as a gunner having been raised to the rank of General. His name is Arroinaux, and he enlisted in 1867 at the age of eighteen, in a volunteer regiment of artillery. As a sergeant-major he took part in the early stages of the Franco-German War. He escaped from Sedan, crossed into Belgium, and joined the French Navy at Grenoble. Returning to the front again he distinguished himself on several occasions.
