SEWERAGE BILL INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE TUESDAY

Bill to Give Effect to Recent Resolution Giving Permission to Fredericton to Empty Its Sewage Into River Brought Down by Premier Pugsley—His Remarks Upon the Occasion—Personally Opposed to the Measure.

In the closing moments of yesterday afternoon's session at the House Premier Pugsley introduced a bill entitled "An Act to give effect to the resolution of the Legislative Assembly in regard to discharge of sewage of the City of Fredericton in the St. John River."

The bill is a brief one, but printed copies have not been distributed as yet in the House. The bill, however, briefly speaking, amends 6 Edward VII, chapter 40, by striking out all the words after "one and one-half" in the fifth line.

This act therefore will mean that the city's sewerage outfall is continued as legal, while that part of the act passed last year making it necessary to have the city apply to the Board of Health for permission to empty the sewage into the river is stricken out.

In introducing the bill, the Premier said:

"I wish it to be distinctly understood that in doing this I am acting in my capacity as leader of this House. A vote of the House has overruled the decision of the Board of Health and of the government. No matter what my own personal views may be, and they are just the same as they were when I was a member of the government, and I will not ask the gentlemen who support the government to treat this from a party standpoint. I want my own position and that of my colleagues to be made very clear on this question. I know that there exists a strong feeling that if the government had insisted on the support of gentlemen on this side of the House the resolution would not have been carried. Let me point out the fact that if the leader of the Opposition had been able to hold his own followers in line it would not have been necessary or proper to require supporters of the government to vote against the resolution. I thought it was right that they should exercise their own judgment, and I am again saying that in discussing this bill every member of this House should have the most perfect liberty of action."

In House Of Death

When she asked for Mervyn, the servant said she'd speak to his mistress and run to the head of the stairs to call the latter up. She came up slowly, breathing hard, and her face was very pale, and after looking curiously at Mervyn she led her into a room on the ground floor.

"Of course you know Mr. Rhodes is only lodging here and has been very unwell," she said.

"Yes, very unwell, I have traveled over a hundred miles today for that purpose."

"It seems so strange like, you being alone. You mustn't mind my plain way of speaking, but the doctor's orders to me were so very strict—now Miss Jarvis, he says I've brought my friend here to be nursed back to health and strength and enjoy the breezing air, but you understand he's got to be absolutely quiet. Don't let anyone see him on business—not on any account," she says, because if you do it may put him all back again. I want you to understand how I am situated, Miss."

"I must see Mr. Rhodes," said Mervyn firmly. "My name is Hawthorne of Beaulieu Court, and Mr. Rhodes is a great friend of ours."

"Well, Miss," began the woman in a much more deferential manner.

"What tell me first, interrupted the girl, do you mean that Mr. Rhodes is so ill that an interview may do him harm?"

"Them's the doctor's orders miss," replied the woman with sympathy, in her voice as she saw Mervyn's distress. "But I should think it would cheer him up a bit. He do seem dreadfully down."

Mervyn sighed and there was a doubt the reason for her distress. Not only was he ill, and she had never been able to be near him, but she would not now be able to tell him anything of the trouble at the Court for fear of doing him harm.

"I will see him, Mrs. Jarvis," she said after a slight pause. "And I will do my best to keep off subjects that worry him."

WEAK HEART SYSTEM WAS RUN-DOWN

When the heart is healthy and performing its functions naturally, it should beat regularly seventy-two times a minute without ceasing to contract the slightest inconvenience or distress.

When it begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast, slow, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

The least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.
