WHERE THE ORIGINAL BOOK OF MORMON IS.—Elders Orson Pratt and J. F. Smith, two high dignitaries in the Mormon Church, arrived in Richmond on Saturday, and inquired for David Whitmer, "the only living witness of the translation of the Book of Mormon, and custodian of the original manuscrit. of the translation of the Book of Mormon, and custodian of the original manuscript as taken down by Oliver Cowdry." The visitors were directed to Mr. Whitmer's residence, and on meeting him announced the object of their visit, which was to secure the manuscript for keeping in the archives of the Church at Salt Lake City. Mr. Whitmer declined to give up the book on any terms. He has had it in his possession for nearly half a century, and regarded himself as the proper custodian of it. He intends to hold it until the proper time shall arrive for its surrender to those authorized to receive it when he will give it up. While refusing to give up the volume, he readily brought it forth and exhibited it to his visitors. They promptly pronounced he readily brought it forth and exhibited it to his visitors. They promptly pronounced it the original copy of the Book of Mormon, Elder Pratt being familiar with the handwriting of Cliver Cowdry, the writer. They offered Mr. Whitmer any price he might ask for the volume; but, finding him resolute, left him after a pleasant visit of one hour, with the request that he continue to take cood care of it, so that the Church might, reproductively and the continue of the countries have doubled, or at most one single century of freedom, in round numbers, from 2,000,000 to 45,000,000.
