

Black and Fortunes.

It is being made in Tasmania from around the Golden Mare property, near Warburton. When it was discovered that the contractors had used less valuable material, it seemed like paving the road with gold.

A goose that laid the golden egg was a story of the chickens of the past. A gold rush at Santa Barbara, California, was occasioned by the discovery of small nuggets in the crops of small chickens killed on a local farm. Another consequence was a rivalry among poultry to see which crops contained in addition to corn.

A poor man in Chile bought the bones of a house for a sum equal to the value of the bones with which he was proposed to build a wall in his garden. He found one containing a large percentage of gold. He came from originally, and his work produced fifteen thousand, so the foundations proved to be a fortune.

Men, who had prospected for gold, discovered a single trace of precious metal, came to the end of their strength and their resources, and in the end task struck a vein weighing 180 pounds. Even though he found for more than a million.

A diamond was discovered by a half-breed who, stirring the embers of a camp fire, noticed a strange color for which he could not account. He mentioned the fact to his wife and within half an hour the operations were begun. Each day at earth contained gold. When both capital and hope exhausted that the last stroke revealed the fabulous riches of the big Bonanza silver mine, a house which has yielded silver to the value of forty millions sterling. The mine of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, was struck by a poor priest, and an abandoned claim for an "angel" and two brothers named who earned a miserable living.

hood by carrying fuel, found in a crevice opened by an earthquake an enormous block of silver worth a quarter of a million sterling.

But the discovery of South African diamonds remains the most romantic in the world. In 1887 John O'Reilly stopped for the night at the house of a farmer named Van Nickerck. Children were playing on the floor with pretty pebbles which they had found in the river. Looking at one of the stones, O'Reilly said, "That might be a diamond."

The Boer farmer laughed and said that diamonds were not to be had for the stooping. However, O'Reilly obtained the farmer's permission to take the pebble to Cape Town, promising to give him half the proceeds if it were of value.

At Colesburg he stopped at a tavern and displayed his stone, scratching a name of glass with it to prove his contention that it was a diamond. But the other fellows scratched glass with their gun-knives and hung the pebble out of the window. O'Reilly retrieved it, and on reaching Cape Town was told that it was a diamond of twenty-two and a half carats. O'Reilly sold it for 23,000, and divided the amount with Nickerck. He found the Jewish man bought the stone and sold it immediately to an experienced buyer for $55,000.

A Man of Varied Talents

A French Diplomatist of varied character died on May 17, 1838. This was Talleyrand, who was the puzzle of Europe. First he entered the church, and even while under the rule he mocked at her follies so much that the Pope excommunicated him for his cynical behaviour, and compelled him to resign his priesthood. He then engaged himself for diplomacy, but was no better as a diplomat than as a Churchman. He got exiled with others, and came to London, but the Alien Act, passed by the English Parliament, sent Talleyrand to the United States, where he gained some experience of a peaceful Republic, a contrast to the rule of Robespierre. On the death of this tyrant, Talleyrand returned to France and resumed his crafty statesmanship—for the Revolution and against it—working for the aggrandisement of Napoleon, and yet convicting at his fall. This contradictory minister acted also for Philip. Not long before the death of Talleyrand, an able English writer, speaking of the brilliant apothecary, said: "What are they all to the practical skill with which this extraordinary man has contrived to baffle all the calamities of thirty years, full of the ruin of all power, ability, courage, and fortune? Here is the survivor of the age of the Bastille, the age of the guillotine, the

The Will

There comes a time in the life of every man when he must leave his worldly possessions to the care of another. In anticipation of this, therefore, the first obligation resting on an individual who is possessed of property is the making of a will, and this should be done before the capacities become impaired by time or the ravages of disease.

mackerel is seized, that you hear talk of the ill-luck which has come to a fishing village after a great glut of fish. Gilt means waste, and ill-luck will always follow waste.

They will tell you in some Cornish villages of how at times in the past the pilchards have come and the men were not ready. Hence the "pilcher" have gone. As if in support of the superstition, at one port paid watchers are always on the cliff waiting for the return of the pilchards which have not been there in any quantity for the last ten years.

Oceanographers may have their own theories for the drifting away of the pilchards, but the fishers have theirs too.

It is in the fishing places of glorious Devon that no offer to help is ever refused as a fishing craft besches. The beachcomber or the wastrel who puts leisurely hands to the rowlock or the end of a rope for the sake of a few pence, is never pushed aside.

For the time may come when all help will be needed to save boats and men, and it is ill-luck to cast aside aid in the hour of safety.

The Clerk's Commandments.

By S. B. Gilkerson.

1—As soon as thou gettest to thy place of business in the morning pull off thy coat and go to work; then shalt thou prosper and make the word "failure" spell "success."

2—Thou shalt not go about thy business looking "bum" for thou shalt know that thy personal appearance goes a long way, may even further than a letter of recommendation.

3—Thou shalt not draw a salary on excuses. Thou shalt not say to those who chide thee, "I really didn't think."

4—Thou shalt not wait to be told what to do, nor shalt thou watch the clock and sigh for the hand to point to six, for if thou dost this, verily thy days shall not be long on the job which thou hast.

5—Thou shalt not fail to do thy duty towards the Boss, nor to maintain own integrity. Thou shalt not be guilty of anything that will lessen thy good respect of thyself.

6—Thou shalt not covet the job of the other fellow, nor his salary, nor the position he hath earned by his own hard labor, but get one such as he hath by thine own efforts.

7—Thou shalt not "blow in" all of thy salary. Thou shalt learn to live on less than thy salary is. Thou shalt not contract debts which thou canst not see thy way clearly to pay, for behold, the collector cometh and might cause thee to have a "rough house."

8—Thou shalt not be afraid to blow thine own horn, but not so as to disgust others, but shalt always remember that he who fails to blow his own horn at the proper time findeth no one standing ready to blow it for him.

9—Thou shalt not hesitate to say "Yes," also "No" at the proper time, and mean it when you do, nor shalt thou fail to remember that there are times when it is unsafe to say either. Thou shalt not bind thyself with a hasty judgement.

10—Thou shalt give every other man a square deal. This is the last and great commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this condition hang all the law and the profits of the business world.—The Beaver.

Ice is Dry.

There seems to be a popular misconception in the supposition that aqueous vapor and ice are wet. They are in themselves dry, so it has been pointed out by competent investigators, and become wet only when they turn to water. So dry is aqueous vapor, it seems, that it will dry any moist object with which it comes in contact. Superheated steam, before it condenses, is a dry gas. Ice feels wet if the temperature of the hand is sufficient to melt it; as ice is dry. Ant-

It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes.

It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

other misconception is that the air can be either dry or moist. It is condensed aqueous vapor in the air that is moist, and it would be moist if there were no air. A given quantity of aqueous vapor confined in a given space will be wet or dry, according to the temperature. At 82 degrees, for instance, it might be partially condensed, and consequently wet, while at 70 degrees, owing to expansion, it would be dry.—Washington Star.

"High-Speed Steel."

"High-speed steel" for cutting tools has been well known for years, and an improved form of this material has been introduced in Sheffield, England. It is reported that this steel has four times the cutting power of any other in use. The composition is, it appears, still a secret, but it is said to be the first "high-speed steel" that can be hardened in cold water without danger. It can also be hardened with oil or in a cold blast. Tools made of it wear out much less rapidly and require much less grinding than those made of the older kinds of steel. They will also go on working at a high temperature longer. But the makers themselves say that this steel does not by any means mark the final development of "high-speed steel."—Washington Star.

Fisk Tire and Rubber.

1919—$48. 1921—$9.50. NOW $18.50.
Present production is 20,000 tires daily, and plans are being made to 24,000. In 1921 the company acquired the entire property of the Federal Rubber Co., consisting of 250 acres in Massachusetts and smaller plants in Rhode Island, and this Spring it constructed with the Durant Motor Co. for its entire 1922 requirements.

Although present prices are double the low of last year, we believe considerably higher prices are in store for Fisk Rubber Company.
