Thief Makes a Big Haul.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Yesterday morning the messenger of the Northwestern Nationa Bark called at the postoffice for the bank's mail. He was given part of it and was told to call for the remainder in fifteen minutes. Just before the expiration of that time a young man who had evidently overheard the conversation with the messenger put his head in at the delivery wicket and said. "I want the rest of the Northwestern Bank's mail." It was given to him without question, and nothing more was thought of the matter until the arrival of the regular messenger. Then there was a scurrying portion of them being under the Dependent Pension Act of June 27, 1890.

Reads and Writes Upside Down.

York, Pa., Jan. 23.—A teacher in the public schools in this city, has discovered among her scholars a little miss of 10 years who can only read when her book is turned upside down. When writing on her slate she anakes the characters also inverted. The parents were told of their daughter's peculiarity, and Dr. Brickley, an oculist of this city, was called on. He found the girl's eyes to be normal, and arrived at the conclusion that the strange freak of vision was contracted in her early school days, when she formed the habit of perusing her hooks in an unnatural position. The only cure the doctor could devise was to start her at the bottom of the ladder anain. She is now learning the alphabet again. It seems entirely new te her. Reads and Writes Upside Down.
