FRUIT CULTURE IN ESSEX Char W.

A Model Farm at Leamington primary reason of sowing clover is, Owned by London Dentist— Scientific Peach Culture.

Peaches this year will in all probability be a good crop. This is, at least, what Dr. W. A. Piper, of this city, hopes, for he is the possessor of one of the finest-conducted orchards in the province, where grow the very choicest of this delicious fruit. His farm is located on the shores of Lake Erie in a place excellently adapted for the ington, in the county of Essex. Those who have seen it declare it to be one of the prettiest spots imaginable. admirably. Driving along the road and looking down the rows of trees which extend for a quarter of a mile, one looks out on to the blue water of Erie and sees place is managed on scientific principles it is what might be termed a model farm. Peach culture to be profitable must be scientifically conducted, the doctor says. However, he does not do that himself, it being rather an investment, as he has a young man on the place who has absolute charge of its management. This is Mr. William Copeland, who has had considerable experience in the work and in which he is greatly interested. Mr. Copeland this four to six inches apart. year has the farm in a beautiful condition, and with proper natural influence the crop should be a large one.

THE OUTLOOK. When asking Dr. Piper as to the peach outlook an Advertiser reporter took occasion to learn something of the culture of peaches, and the explanation will no doubt be of interest to many. The place was laid out about seven years ago by the doctor, its location being chosen first, for the sandy soil adapted to the growth of peaches, and then for the reason that it was near the lake. The latter condition is of importance, because the cold water that washes up to the very orchard keeps the budding back in the spring and thus the trees escape the early frosts that are experienced in the in-land districts, while in the fall the water tempers the atmosphere. The choice of ground has proved a most happy one, for excellent results have a thorough study was made of culture in order that they would not go at it blindly.

CAREFUL PLANTING. Trees two years old from the pit were procured and dipped in a strong decoction of tobacco water in order to kill any insects that might be on the roots. Then the planting was done, the spacing being about 15 by 20 feet. It was three years after planting before any fruit was borne, the full crop maturing in about six or seven years. On the attainment of a full crop the life thereafter of a peach tree averages from 12 to 15 years. The work on a peach farm begins the first of March, when the pruning is done. Then in the early spring comes he requires. the spraying, this being repeated two grown between the trees is plowed up which he also hopes to prove profitin the spring and being turned into able. So far it is past the experimental the ground affords a supply of nitro- stage, he says, and the weed is growing gen, which acts as a fertilizer. The luxuriantly.

It was noticed however, that in a part of the farm where weeds had been allowed to grow, the snow was kept there and prevented the frost going so deep, and the trees survived the heavy frost of that year. The destroyed portion was replanted and since then all the space a place excellently adapted for the between the trees is sown with red culture. This is repeated in the month lawyers call ferae naturae—wild things the orchard is surrounded with the of October. From the time of plowing, most picturesque country, and as the also the cultivator is used weekly until the 1st of August, when the clover is sown. It may not be generally known, either, that a great many of the peaches are thrown away almost as soon as they appear. This is in June, and the "thinning" is no easy matter. Right along the rows of trees every one of the trees is examined (and there are something like 4,000 trees on Dr. Piper's farm), and the peaches thinned so that those that are left are about fruit is allowed to mature. As evidence of the quality of the peaches that are obtained by working along scientific principles, the farm's exhibits at the Western Fair have carried away a number of first prizes. The harvesting is an important matter, more so with peaches than most fruits, owing to their delicate nature. The slightest bruise will injure a peach, so that experienced men are necessary for the gathering of the crop. Hence no boys are ever engaged for the occupation. Of course there is a range of varieties in an orchard of been attained. When this farm was between the last of August and the taken there was nothing whatever middle of October. It may probably seem very natural that Frank Waters should take to the river, but it was really quite natural that he and the water should not agree. The facts were that about half past o'clock this morning he went down York street and just north of the bridge walked out into the shallow water, where he sat down. Three fee out the water is only about deep, and those who have tried it say that the feeling is very pleasant. Perhaps this was the reason that the suicide did not hasten his operations. At any rate he simply sat down, Brown, a gentleman living on Byror avenue, came across the bridge, and, thinking it was a drunken man who had fallen in, went to the water's edge and asked him what he was doing. Other men came on the scene, and Frank thought it was up to him to do the duck act. He told them to go away as he wanted to die, and with that he threw his head under water. # Pursuing the Appendix.

Dr. John Henry Carstens' argument to the state medical society against the indiscriminate removal of the vermiform appendix appears to be irregular and unethical. The better the appendix, the better the operation, and the more sport in the

At this late day we cannot accept Dr. Carsten's theory that a healthy appendix ought not to be removed. An appendix is an appendix, whether healthy or not, and modern surgery has definitely ascertained that the function of the appendix is to be amputated. That is its place in the economy of man, and for countless ages nature has directed her efforts, in the process of evolution, to the bene-There are several reasons for doing ficent work of producing a vermiform appendix that could be easily separated from the patient together with $250. She has succeeded, and when Dr. Carsten advises that the appendix be left alone to wither and flap like the last leaf on the tree, it strikes us that he is counseling the surgeons to violate the ordinances of nature. If Carsten would content himself with an imitation of the fish and game laws, and advocate a closed season for the appendix, the suggestion might be worthy of serious consideration, Perhaps it might be better for everybody if no appendices were taken, say, between the 1st of July and the 1st of October, and none less than 4 years old and no more than 25 by any one surgeon in a season, unless the taking of the appendix were absolutely necessary to feeding the docter's this size so that maturity exists at This would be a reasonable regulation, different periods, all within the time and it would tend to eliminate the mere pot hunter, who slashes reck-
