A Letter of Introduction

Mrs. Carrington was enjoying the situation. These young people were really delicious. They thought they had outwitted her, and were discussing gravely what they meant to do with the maidens when they got them. The stories were to be handed over to her husband's credit, for distribution among the widows and orphans in England; it was a touching scheme, but it was not the one which Mrs. Carrington proposed to see carried out.

But though she enjoyed her triumph, and did not mind in the least that she had gained it by admitting, she was really tired. Moreover, her head-ache had not been helped by half an hour's crowding with her car to the keyhole of the door. She expected to spend an hour's time to-morrow, and she did not want to be late. She was tired, and she was tired, and she was tired.

"Really to bed, this time," she said. "But don't go, Mr. Scarborough, on that account. I don't suppose a chaperone is really necessary, as Eliza's friend is with her. No doubt that was why Mademoiselle Mone de la Mar-I have got her to go with me. She is a very nice girl, and she is a very nice girl, and she is a very nice girl."

"No, so you can tell him what you like of her. Say that she's an interesting woman with a very sad past, a fascinating creature with abnormally developed criminal tendencies, and that a day spent in watching her will be well worth while to a close observer of character. Val B. Montague thinks himself rather a connoisseur of character, and is always complaining that the female villains he meets are bloodless and feeble—no real gritty play in 'em, sir. Explain to him, said Eliza, laughing, that this one is real hard sand, and he'll do anything you ask for the chance of studying her."

Scarborough thought for a moment. "You know him better than I do," he said at length. "Don't be annoyed at what I am going to ask. Is he absolutely trustworthy?"

"Yes," she said simply. "I mean," said Scarborough, "would it be safe to let him see her?"

Forget Yourself.

Miss Cynthia Gray: I am a constant reader of your page, and write to see if you can help me in my difficulty. 1. When out at an evening and meeting new acquaintances, I do not seem able to be as free and sociable as the other girls, and am so quiet it gives people the idea that I am stiff. It makes me appear awkward and makes me feel uncomfortable, and often I wish I had not gone. I try to dress as neat and attractive as the other girls. 2. What will improve the complexion? Thanking you in advance for any advice you can give me, I am, A. J.

A. J.—It is hard, indeed, to overcome natural backwardness in company, but there is always a bright side to everything—it is better to be a little shy and perhaps, constrained in manner, than too forward and free. Know that while it is easy for me to say "Forget yourself and try to think only of giving pleasure and entertainment to others," it is difficult to put into practice. However, it is well worth trying. If there are any in the company who do not seem to be enjoying themselves, or are ill at ease, try to brighten the evening for them. Discuss local topics (not necessarily gossip), and endeavor to find out what interests them particularly and get them to talk about it. In doing so you will be surprised to see how you forget your own troubles. Another good thing is to read as much as possible of what is going on. Read the daily papers, and the current articles in two or three of the monthly magazines. I stated my views on this subject in issue of the 17th, so please hunt up the answer to Blonde.

To Remove Stains.

Dear Miss Gray: Will you please answer the following questions: 1. How can I remove dry white paint from window panes; from linoleum? 2. How to remove a yellow stain from a green Brussels rug? 3. What color of paint will suit the dining-room where the paper is green and pink? 4. As the warm weather is at hand, I would advise you giving a picnic instead of an indoor affair. A box of salad packed into a wide-mouthed jar, olives and pickles, and a variety of cake, make a dainty and satisfying lunch.

To Stop Teasing.

Dear Miss Gray: The people around here are always teasing me. How can I stop it? 2. What are the Advertiser Patterns Beauty Pattern Company.

latest popular pieces? 3. Is it proper for a girl to go driving with a fellow after 10 o'clock at night? 4. Is it proper for a girl to come home with a fellow who has been calling on her sister, when she objects? 5. Is Bruce a good name for a boy? 6. Give me a good recipe for fudge. Thanking you in advance, FLORENCE.

A.—1. Don't get angry or annoyed, but seem not to mind it, and soon the fun of teasing will be taken away. 2. Any nude store will furnish you with a list. 3. If returning from a garden party, picnic, or other outing, yes. 4. Although you have mixed your notions somewhat, you evidently mean that the sister objects. I do not understand the situation sufficiently to pass an opinion. 5. Yes. 6. Two cups granulated sugar, half cup milk, one tablespoon butter, stir constantly, and boil until it forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Remove from the stove and add a half teaspoonful vanilla. Beat until it becomes smooth, and pour into a buttered pan. Nut meats may be added, or two table-spoonfuls grated chocolate to make chocolate fudge.

Wedding Cake. Dear Miss Gray: Please publish a recipe for wedding cake, and also a suitable icing, and oblige. A SUBSCRIBER.

2.—Two cups butter, 4 cups sugar, 2 cups molasses, 12 cups flour, 2 pounds raisins, 2 pounds currants, 1/2-pound mixed peel, 1/2-pound dates, 1/2-pound lard, 2 tablespoons salt, 1/2-pound mixed ground spice; juice of one lemon.

Icing.—One pint granulated sugar, mixed thoroughly with water enough to dissolve when heated. Let it boil until it threads from the spoon. Beat the whites of 2 eggs stiff, stir the boiling sugar into the egg whites, gradually beating until it is smooth. Flavor with almond essence. The cake may need two or more coats of this icing to make it a decided white color.

One of the easiest ways of giving a new lease of life to an old silk or satin dress is by dyeing it with some transparent material; net, chiffon, marquisette, silk, voile, etc. Some of these materials are quite inexpensive. The nets, for instance, cost very little, and are easy to dye. Children's about a yard and a quarter wide, and you can get a very wearable quality for 80 or 90 cents a yard.

You can use a black dyeing over white or over a color, provided the color is brilliant enough not to be totally secured by the over-dye. Black worn with white or with a vivid color is the most popular color of the year, but you cannot dye black with another dye, you like. For instance, American beauty pink is used with royal purple, old blue with fresh color, king's blue and old gold, royal blue and mastic, parrot blue and yellow, and so on through a rainbow of colors.

If you have an old gown that you want to use as a foundation for a new dress of color, you can dye it over the old skirt and cut it over in a new pattern. Its lines must be narrow, for merely dyeing the dress will be necessary. If you have a dress of a pale color, you can dye it over the old skirt and cut it over in a new pattern. Its lines must be narrow, for merely dyeing the dress will be necessary.

It is a good idea to have a dress of a pale color, you can dye it over the old skirt and cut it over in a new pattern. Its lines must be narrow, for merely dyeing the dress will be necessary.

PRINCESS WANTS ENGLISH HUSBAND

Louise of Germany Confides Her Ambition to a Friend in London.

London, May 21.—Princess Louise of Germany is quoted as saying to an intimate friend during her visit to England which ended today:

"I don't want to be a Bavarian, a Wurtemberg, or a Viennese. I want to be English."

The attention of Emperor William, during his visit in London, paid to the Princess of Wales, and the official announcement that the prince will visit Potsdam during the present summer, has been met with great interest by the people of Wales and Princess Victoria Louise, only daughter of the German Emperor.

Princess Louise is slightly older than the young prince, Mecklenburg and hand-some. Both are great-grandchildren in direct descent of Queen Victoria, and some object to their union on account of consanguinity. The anti-German extremists also object on account of race prejudice and national feeling.

But with many others the idea is popular. It is conceded that were Princess Louise united to the Prince of Wales, the circumstance would go far to obliterate the Germanophile in the minds of the two nations.

And were Louise queen of England there is no doubt she would do much to foster the amiable relations between the two nations. The marriage would not be popular with other European nations, and might drive Britain and Germany into very close relations in time.

SIX MONTHS' WORK AT THE CAPITAL

Royal Assent Was Given to One Hundred and Forty-nine Bills.

Ottawa, May 21.—The net results of six months, during which Parliament has been in session, were, so far as actual legislation is concerned, embodied in the 149 bills to which the final assent has been given. Of this list 41 were assented to before the Easter adjournment, and the balance have just been assented to by the deputy governor, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick.

In so far as Government legislation is concerned the principal measures included the guarantee of bonds to the Canadian Northern Railway for the thousand-mile-link of its transcontinental line.

Another bill to amend the railway act by extending the jurisdiction of the railway commission in several important details over railway, telegraph, telephone and express companies; the bill making further provision for forest reserves and parks in Western Canada; the bill extending the jurisdiction of the board of railway commissioners to the Hudson Bay Railway, the Quebec bridge, and above all, the reciprocity proposals.

There are left for Parliament when it reassembles further consideration of the bills respecting the acquisition of branch lines of the Intercolonial; respecting the sale and handling of explosives; grain elevators, the Hudson Bay Railway, the Quebec bridge, and above all, the reciprocity proposals.

PORCUPINE FIRES EXPLODE MAGAZINE

District Around Pearl Lake Being Swept by Flames.

Porcupine, May 21.—Ignited by the bush fires, the dynamite magazine on the Hollinger property exploded, breaking the pipes, and the whole place was gutted by the flames. Mr. L. K. Timmins, who is here, said that the loss on the Hollinger property is $70,000.

The buildings on the Timmins property have also been burned.

The district around Pearl Lake has been swept by the flames, and the settlement around A. R. Lake has been completely wiped out.

Two houses and a general store were burned at South Porcupine. The schoolhouse at Porcupine, reported burned on Friday night, was saved.

Construction gangs on the Timmins line are working hard to get the line open again.

INVALIDS' THEATRE

The Latest Experiments in Curing by Mental Suggestion.

London, May 21.—Therapeutic theatres are the latest phase of the nature cure in Germany. The theory is that acting and reciting are cures for mental and nervous diseases. An Austrian doctor named Lack professes to have cured many persons by forcing them to act before audiences of their friends in the open air.

The explanation given is that acting takes the patients out of themselves, and thus prevents them from thinking of their own maladies. The cure is given by the patient's own suggestion.
