

TRUSTEES VOTE BUSINESS LEGAL

Ratify Proceedings of Special Meeting After Lengthy Discussion.

DEBATE WAXES WARM

Several St. Thomas School Board Members Indulge in Personalities.

Special to London Advertiser.
ST. THOMAS, March 28.—After long discussion, the board of education, at a special meeting held Tuesday night, ratified the business transacted at a meeting Monday night, which had since been protested by four members of the board who were absent. As the result of the decision Tuesday night, increases granted to five public school principals and one janitor stand.

The long discussion had no effect on the members of the board as far as their stand was concerned, as apparently no one changed his mind concerning the legality of Monday's meeting. The six members who were present Monday voted for the ratification of the business, while the four who were absent, including Trustees George Spackman, R. W. Johnston, E. C. Harvey and F. Wright, voted against it.

After Trustees Johnston and Spackman attacked the action of the six members of the board, with M. Spackman denying that the vote of the internal management committee on the Friday previous to the meeting had been unanimous in deciding to call a meeting Monday afternoon instead of in the evening, and claiming that little business of consequence could have been transacted in the 25 minutes which the meeting lasted, Trustee A. W. Baines took up the cudgel of defence.

Regrets Board's Action.
Mr. Baines said that it was unfortunate that the board had become little more than a rubber stamp. It had become notorious throughout Western Ontario, he said, and years would be required before it could win back its former dignity and standing.

He regretted that certain members had resorted to hairsplitting. If the procedure was to be followed, the speaker claimed he could prove that the meetings since the first of the year had been illegal on technicalities, and that Monday's meeting was the most legal of all.

He produced a copy of the bylaws, and asked by what authority the board was bound by the contents. The bylaws, he said, were passed several years ago, and had no bearing on the present board. If they were to be binding they should be ratified from year to year.

He then read from the provincial act to prove that unless the date of the first meeting of a new board was fixed by the retiring board it was required to meet on the first Wednesday of the month. This had not been done, he said, therefore all business transacted in the February meeting was illegal, including the appointment of Trustee E. C. Harvey to the board, who was one of those actively protesting Monday's meeting.

Mr. Baines said that he did not intend to go into personalities, but he said that he merely wished to show where hairsplitting would lead.

Quite a number of personalities arose out of and following Mr. Baines' speech.

Trustee Harvey took the reference to his appointment very seriously, and because he said the way in which he was appointed had never been satisfactory to him, causing, as it did, much turmoil among the labor men, he refused to vote until his position was cleared. In one voice the committee acclaimed him a member.

Calls Board a Joke.
Trustee Johnston then claimed he had not been notified of Monday's meeting. Secretary Newton replied that he had been. Mr. Johnston exclaimed, pounding the desk, "I give the lie to you." He afterwards admitted that his wife might have been told of it.

Mr. Johnston also raised a storm when he said the board was a joke, and that he had been laughed at for associating with it. This was considered an insult by Trustee Mrs. McCully and Dr. Bennett, who demanded an apology. Trustee Johnston apologized toward the end of the meeting.

Trustee F. Wright wanted to know by what right Trustee Baines, a newcomer to the board and a comparative newcomer to the city, could dictate to the board in the face of members who upheld its honor for 23 years. He asked the chairman if he was to allow it. Mr. Baines replied that he would sit quietly in a corner if the other members wished him to do so.

The chairman at the beginning of the meeting made a plea for peace and harmony. He also declared that he wished to deny the report which had been circulated that Trustee Conley, representing the separate schools, had taken part in discussions referring to public schools.

THE WEEK IN THE WORLD

BURIED ART TREASURES OF ROME

Exclusive Advertiser Review.

By Canon Meyrick,
Vicar of St. Peter, Mancroft, Norwich.

LONDON, March 28.—The discovery by Professor R. Paribent, in a vineyard two miles from Rome, accidentally came upon a subterranean cemetery.

This contained Christian paintings, Greek and Latin inscriptions, and some sarcophagi or marble tombs. It was soon discovered that this cemetery was but one of many. In the words of a contemporary writer, "Rome was amazed at finding she had other cities, unknown to her, concealed beneath her own suburbs."

There lived in Rome at this time one Bosio, an advocate by profession. He was soon discovered that this cemetery was but one of many. In the words of a contemporary writer, "Rome was amazed at finding she had other cities, unknown to her, concealed beneath her own suburbs."

The Columbus of the subterranean world, he explored every vineyard and studied every record. His adventures were not without danger. On one occasion he and his friends penetrated about a mile into a newly discovered cemetery and, like the heroes of a Jules Verne story, could not find the path to take them home.

This light failed, and Bosio wrote: "I began to fear that I should defile by my vile corpse the sepulchres of the martyrs."

In 1645 John Evelyn wrote of a visit to these cemeteries. "They led us down into a grotto which they affirmed went divers fathoms under the ground. The sides and walls were filled with bones and dead bodies, laid as it were on shelves, whereof some were shut up with broad stones, and some now and then crossed or palisaded in them. At the end of some of these subterranean passages were square rooms with altars in them."

The extent of these catacombs is enormous, though they rarely pass beyond the third mile stone from the city. They are excavated on various levels, three, four, and even five galleries, one above the other. They cross and recross on each of these levels. They are said to be at least 500 miles in extent.

These wonderful excavations were the work of persecuted Christians. They were begun when St. Paul and St. Peter were still in Rome, and they were used as cemeteries for Christians till the city was taken by Alaric in 410. Then for 350 years they were rifled by Goths, Vandals, and Lombards.

Yet even today there are many paintings which still adorn the galleries and the chapels of the catacombs. There are symbolic pictures, the anchor, suggesting hope, sometimes designed to contrast the cross as well—hope through suffering.

There is the Shepherd, a picture much loved by men who might at any moment be flung to the wild beasts of the arena—and, be it noted, the Shepherd carries a goat as well as a lamb, for the outlook of the infant persecuted church was generally one of gloom.

Others of the ancient paintings represented Adam and Eve, the children in the fiery furnace, Daniel in the lion's den, Jonah swallowed by a strange sea-horse.

Now it seems that Prof. Paribent has discovered paintings as old as, or older than, any that the Christians loved to paint over the tombs of their heroic dead.

REJECTS THEORY HELD BY PSYCHO-ANALYSTS

Dr. William Brown, British Psychologist, Declares "Function of Dreams To Guard Sleep."

LONDON, England, March 28.—Dr. William Brown, mental specialist and head of the department of psychology in King's College, University of London, has propounded a novel theory of dreams. He rejected the claim of the psychoanalysts that dreams are always significant, and that every part of them has a meaning which must be looked for in primitive desires lurking in the subconscious mind. He gave them a much simpler significance.

"The function of a dream is to guard sleep," he said before the Institute of Hygiene. "In sleep desires, cravings, anxieties, the memories of earlier days, all of which are the lower and fundamental elements of the mind, well up and strive towards consciousness while the main preoccupation is in abeyance. If they reach consciousness, sleep is at an end, but the dream, which is a sort of intermediary form of consciousness, intervenes and makes the impulse innocuous so that sleep persists. This theory covers the entire ground of all types of dreams."

CONSIDERS SCULLY OF UNSOUND MIND

Dr. W. J. Robinson of London Hospital Testifies at Port Huron Hearing.

TELLS OF DELUSIONS

Probe Opened in Michigan Court Adjourned Until Wednesday.

Special to London Advertiser.
SARNIA, March 28.—Dr. W. J. Robinson, superintendent of the Ontario hospital for insane, London, Ontario, was on the stand for an hour, Monday afternoon, at the Port Huron circuit court, testifying to the record of Anthony Scully, the Stratford, Ontario, man, who went to Port Huron in February and murdered his father Cornelius Scully, 80, with a hammer and seriously injured his sister, Mrs. William Toles, in a fit of maniacal rage. Scully had three times escaped from the asylum at London, Ontario.

Dr. Robinson said that Scully was first admitted to the asylum from Stratford, on December 11, 1913. He escaped on February 17, 1915, was readmitted July 3, 1916, escaped again July 3, 1917, by climbing the asylum wall, was caught immediately, and finally escaped in May, 1919.

The asylum authorities took the usual measurements of advising the police and his relatives and after a month elapsed struck him from the asylum roll. Dr. Robinson gave the opinion that if Scully were tried for murder he should and would be found insane. He considered his mind permanently unbalanced and while in some things he was intelligent as other men he suffered from the delusions of an insane person. All the time he was an inmate at London he held the delusion that some one was trying to poison him and at times would eat nothing but fruit.

He wrote letters as describing means of stopping the war by providing certain food for the Germans.

Witness did not think he would have the mental power to form the intention to do a criminal act in the future, but he was not malicious. Scully could not, in his opinion, resist the temptation to attack his father and sister. Dr. Robinson was closely examined by Prosecuting Attorney Henry Baird, who asked if it was the custom to allow dangerous inmates to work under conditions that lent themselves easily to escape. The investigation was adjourned to Wednesday, when Dr. T. Heavenrich and W. B. James who have examined Scully, will give their evidence in court. Scully took the keenest interest in the proceedings, on the same charge.

Officer Smith swore that he had seen Irwin take four bottles of whiskey from the door of the crossing tower shortly after the robbery. These bottles, the witness said, were handed over to Detective Graham of the C. P. R. by Irwin, who gave the officers to understand that they had been given to him by young Campbell and a companion.

Campbell, when he took the stand, claimed that he had not given the whiskey to Irwin, but he had no knowledge of his companion, whom he named as William McCarthy, having given them away.

Campbell told the court that he and McCarthy had learned about the car of booze when at the Michigan Central depot. They had heard it was C. P. R. agent talking about it over the telephone. That night they had gone to see Irwin, he testified, and had asked about the location of the car and then had borrowed a pinch bar and a wrench, being unable to open the car door. A portion of the roof had been torn off and the cases of whiskey removed in that manner. He swore that Irwin had held a lantern while he and McCarthy endeavored to remove the nuts on the car door.

Although a warrant was sworn out for McCarthy's arrest two weeks ago, he has not been apprehended.

LIVER TROUBLE BAD BILIOUS ATTACKS

When your liver becomes sluggish and inactive your whole health suffers. Your bowels become constipated, the tongue coated, the breath bad, the stomach full and sick, and bilious spells occur on account of the liver holding back the bile which is so essential to promote the movements of the bowels, and the bile gets into the blood. Instead of passing out through the usual channel.

The only way to keep the liver active and working properly, and thus get rid of the nasty bilious attacks is to keep the bowels regular using Ordinary boracic acid does not seem to stop the disease, and the parents are warned on the first sign of inflammation of the eyes to take their children to the family doctor. The school medical service is working on the problem, and has been using zinc sulphate as a preventive. This is working splendidly. The co-operation of parents is requested to stamp out the epidemic.
