Why, something which is, but which you can't see, of course. Sounds like magic, doesn't it? Well, that's exactly what it is. Your magic wand is a water-moistened brush. You "wave" it lightly over a black and white picture, and presto! It comes out in the prettiest colors.

Interesting—well you can imagine! Some are to cut out and arrange in the most fascinating ways. But not only are "Invisibles" interesting, but they offer a great opportunity to win a prize—a real prize. Read a little further. Imagine being paid for playing! Magic all the way through!

Teachers of schools and institutions, particularly those of the lower grades, are invited to enter their classes in this contest.

We would appreciate the opinion of teachers regarding these "Invisibles," and welcome any suggestion they may care to offer.
