CREDITS SUSTAIN OUR FOREIGN TRADE

The public hardly realizes the extent to which Canada's export trade is dependent on the providing of credits for other governments. Since the middle of 1918 credits amounting to $240,000,000 have been advanced to the British Government as follows:

Imperial Munitions Board, $132,000,000; for the purchase of Canadian grain, $55,000,000; for exports of dairy products, $35,000,000; for the sale of the B. C. Salmon pack, $8,000,000; for other exports of food, $10,000,000.

This money came from the Canadian public in the form of loans. Out of their savings over 1,000,000 people in this country bought Dominion bonds, and thus provided the funds out of which these advances were made. This practice must be continued if Canada is to get her share of the export trade. Those who buy War Savings and Thrift Stamps supply money for these credits.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

In outlining the difficulties met by the committee on reparation in determining the approximate war losses of any one belligerent, Captain Andre Tardieu, one of the French delegates to the peace conference, said that France alone would present a bill for 450,000 houses which have been destroyed. This does not include factories, it was added. M. Tardieu said the Allies had agreed that Germany must pay to the limit of her capacity.

TULLE HAT VOGUE

Headgear Classified as Newest and Most Up-to-Date.

Unexpected Creation Appears When Toques and Bonnets to Match Winter Togs Are Worn.

After all it is the unexpected and unusual little thing which seems to set the final seal of success on one's appearance. Smartly dressed women realize this and often gain their reputation for being smartly dressed by the addition of something original and pleasing—and perhaps also a bit more daring than the more conservative choose.

Nothing is more unexpected at this time, writes a fashion correspondent, than the vogue of the tulle hat, for instance. Just when most of us are reaching out after fur toques and bonnets to match our heavy winter togs the very newest, most up-to-date creation of millinery appears to be the tulle hat. It has taken on surprising shapes also, as for instance a curious, upstanding brown tulle bonnet with a crown like a Cossack's cap. Around the brim fares a band of tulle which ends in a flat, smart bow directly over the face.

As yet it is only the brown tulle hat which seems to be favored. This suggests coquetry, for long ago French women decreed that the very perfection of artistic effect was produced by a hat of so nearly the exact shade of the hair that one could hardly tell where hat left off and hair began, so clearly and softly did the two mingle. Of course the brown shades of tulle permit this perfect harmony, as brown hair is easily matched.

Along with the tulle hat come some new feather trimmings—feathers trained and curled into all sorts of designs, such as leaves, blossoms, triangles, rosettes and coxcocks. A certain wide-brimmed hat of leaf brown tulle which has been much admired has its crown entirely covered with feather leaves laid on quite flat and overlapping so that nothing of the hat underneath is visible. The hem is wide and flaring and is made of several layers of tulle placed one above the other.

Another hat of the same sort, also of brown tulle, has the same wide and flaring brim of several thicknesses of the tulle, and at intervals narrow bands of the feathers appear. The only trimming is a very wide, flat butterfly bow tied just in front. This hat has the thinnest of crowns through which the hair shows prettily. Of course these frail and delicate chapeaux are intended only for the most elaborate and dressy occasions, such as matinees, afternoon teas and restaurant wear.

A variation of the tulle-draped toque of the summer has appeared in a smart model of moleskin and taupe-colored silk net. The fur and the net are cunningly draped together to form the close-fitting hat. From the back the net falls away into a long veil, which ends in a deep band of the moleskin finished with a button and catch to fasten at the back, thus presenting the appearance of a fur collar.

Renfrew Mercury:—To James Taylor of Port Arthur, Ontario, belongs the honor of leading the Province in the acre-profit competition with regard to potatoes. To him the Ontario Department of Agriculture's prize goes. Second prize fell to W. Draycott of Stratton, which place is in the Rainy River section and not a great distance removed from Port Arthur. Mr. Taylor, winner of first prize, raised 283 bushels on a single acre. Production cost him $49.80, and selling at $1.20 per bushel his profit was $289.80. This is an illustration of the remarkable possibilities of intensive agriculture. A small farm thoroughly cultivated will in results discount a large farm which is indifferently tilled.

ANOTHER SMALL NATION.

Roumania Claims Her Terra Irredenta.

Roumania entered the war primarily "to attain her national destiny," but she suffered much as a result of entering the war on the side of the Allies. As the Allies have won, Roumania hopes to realize her ambitions.

It goes without saying that she will demand the abrogation of the treaty of Bucharest of 1917 imposed upon her by the Germans which so shamefully destroyed her economic independence for their benefit, "rectified" her frontiers in the interest of Hungary and gave to Bulgaria the southern part of the Dobruja. In all these respects she will demand the return of the "status quo ante." But she will demand much more. "The national destiny," to attain which she drew the sword, had for its aim the annexation to Roumania of the territory to the west of Transylvania stretching from Semendria through Temesvar almost to Debreczin has fewer islets of Magyars and Germans in it than has Transylvania itself. On the basis of self-determination, this whole territory would in all probability vote to unite with Roumania. Roumania expects at the Peace Conference not only to secure the territory described above, but to be confirmed in the possession of Bessarabia, which she obtained as a result of the Russian debacle. Roumania will also claim upon the principle of nationality that the southern half of the Bukovina, one of the crown lands of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, be united to her territories. If Roumania is granted her claims at the Peace Conference, she will have secured all her "terra irredenta," attained to complete national unity, and become an important state of the second rank with a population of about 14,000,000 and splendid industrial resources with which to develop strength and power.

Everybody Sings in Bohemia. There is an essential balance between music, poetry and story in the folk-song of fishermen. At least it is possible to observe a greater equilibrium between the musical and dramatic sense in this folk than is the case with many other people of Europe and England. If there is a pre-eminence, however, in Szechoslovak songs, it belongs to the music. And indeed it is true that poetic inspiration has been known to give out before the end of a song; but as melody seemed to pour from an infinite source through the consciousness of these singers, irrelevance of text in such cases was not condemned. One writer insists that Bohemians would rather sing the alphabet than not sing at all. Occasionally you find the poetic lapse in the middle or even at the beginning of a song. The tune bursts out, restless as curly cherries, and takes what it can get in the way of textual encouragement:

In our orchard grow splices, grow splices, He who does not understand that—let him get married.

The faltering debut of this song is eclipsed by its amazing rational ending:

Marry, dear Johnny; take for yourself me. Now you have one misery—then you will have two. —Asia Magazine.

Dislikes Too Many Words.

It has been said in humorous comment on M. Stephen Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs in Paris, that he dislikes the French language, because of his insistence with his subordinates that they make their reports short and to the point, cut out redundant expressions, abbreviate sentences, and otherwise use as little French, or, for that matter, any other language as possible. But therein just now M. Pichon is a valuable man at the Peace Conference, and it may well happen that his expressed conviction that "the scourge of diplomacy is words" will help materially in what is sometimes pointedly called "getting down to tacks." M. Pichon, apparently, is one of comparatively few men who fully realize how much can be said or written on any given subject without saying anything really important; and how plausible and convincing it can all sound until a practical person thinks it well over. His miscellaneous and exact first-hand knowledge has more than once surprised his associates. "How," said M. Clemenceau on one occasion, "do you find out all you know?"

A Four Flusher.

She was a four-flusher, particularly as to her abilities in various sports, says the Journal of the American Medical Association: "Do you golf?" he asked. "Oh, I love golf," she answered. "I play at least 36 holes twice a week." "And how about tennis?" "I won the woman's championship in our state." "And do you swim?" "The best I ever did was a half mile straight away," she replied. Somewhat fatigued he changed to literature. "And how do you like Kipling?" he asked. "I kiplined an hour only yesterday," was her unblushing reply.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 478 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.
