MORE ABOUT THE

BROWN TAIL MOTH

CIRCULAR FROM THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

During the spring of this year (1907) notes containing caterpillars of the Brown-tailed Moth were found in fairly large numbers in parts of Kings, Annapolis, Digby and Yarmouth counties. With the heavy co-operation of the citizens of these counties, many caterpillars were destroyed and much temporary damage prevented. However, numerous caterpillars must have been the most careful boarders, and there can be no doubt but that specimens of this serious pest will be observed not only in the sections affected last spring but also in adjoining localities. The people of Nova Scotia are determined to suppress this insect the men of the Department of Agriculture, in whom is reposed an over-sight of these matters, and to whom the people are looking for information should be kept informed as to its movements.

The White Moth, with golden brown terminations to its body, and hence called the Brown-tailed Moth, was flying during July, and has probably reached the province in large numbers previously been found. Its eggs were laid and hatched during August. Since then, small brown caterpillars, a quarter of an inch long, have been feeding on the leaves of fruit and other trees and constructing the nests in which they will pass the winter. These nests may now be found usually attached to the young branches or sprouts of trees and generally toward their tips. Each web consists of a tough web surrounding one or more leaves and enclosing 200 to 300 small caterpillars.

Anyone reading this circular, who knows of a locality where the nests occur, is requested to communicate at the earliest opportunity, with the Agricultural College, Truro. Anyone, unacquainted with the Moth or its nest, who finds any suspicious objects upon trees, particularly fruit trees, oaks, elms, or maples, should send at once in a strong cardboard box, to the College for identification.

It is citizens in every locality where the Moth occurs, will take the trouble to write and inform us, as far as possible, they will greatly facilitate future movements in connection with the suppression of this dangerous pest. This circular is being sent to teachers and citizens in various sections of Nova Scotia. It may be that it will not, directly, reach many who have valuable information. We, however, would solicit everyone, by giving information and by every other means possible to join the campaign against the Brown-tailed Moth. We would particularly request each school teacher to find the conditions which exist in his or her school section and report as soon as possible. United effort during the next six months may save the Province of Nova Scotia from being overrun by one of the most serious of insect pests.

Joker's Corner

HE REMEMBERED

Two men—one a journalist of high standard, and the other a Minister of the Crown, met in the lobby of the Victorian Parliament House. They had been boys in the same country town. "Do you remember me?" the newspaper man asked. The politician looked at him slowly. "Yes I remember you," he said. "You are Bill Smith." "That's me," the newspaper man said; for, as he was not talking for print, he could afford to be ungrammatical. "You're Bill Smith," the Minister said; with a vindictive tone in his voice. "One day I was minding sheep on the common, when you came up with a cup of drop-water out of the well. And because you were thirsty, and I was eleven years minded my sheep while I drew your blooming water!" Then the politician went away to his room in his department, while the journalist sat down to satirize him in a light pastoral.

NOT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

It is the man who looks for trouble who generally finds it. When Bishop Dudley was about to transfer the field of his labors to Kentucky some of his friends were inclined to remonstrate. "So you are really going to Kentucky?" said one of these. "Yes indeed," replied the Bishop. "But do you know what kind of a State that is?" inquired the anxious one. "Why I saw in the paper that in a Kentucky town one man killed another while just treading on a dog. What are you going to do in a place like that?" "Well," replied the Bishop calmly, "I am not going to tread on a dog."

MORE THAN FOUCH

An eight-year-old boy went to a church picnic and, being a favorite with the ladies, had been liberally supplied with good things. When, in the day one of the ladies noticed the boy sitting near a stream with a woeful expression on his face and his hands clasped over his stomach. "Why, what's the matter, Willie?" she kindly asked. "Haven't you had enough to eat?" "Oh, yes," said the boy. "I've had enough. I feel as though I don't want any more."

THE OBSTACLE.

A rich young man, who was trying to learn to work hard, failed in his love with the daughter of his employer but found that his path was by no means clear of obstacles. "You tell me your father objects to your marrying me," he said, in a crestfallen tone. "Is it because I am in his employ? I can leave it and go back to a life of idleness if he prefers." "Oh no, that isn't what he wants," said the object of his desire. "He says I may marry you just as soon as you're valuable enough to have your salary raised."

HENRY WARD BEECHER GOT EVEN

Henry Ward Beecher was often spared much embarrassment by his quickness at repartee. One evening, as he was in the midst of an impassioned speech some one attempted to interrupt him by crowing like a rooster. It was done to perfection; a number of people laughed in spite of themselves, and the speaker's friends felt that the whole effect of the meeting, and of Mr. Beecher's thrilling appeals would be lost.

The orator, however, was equal to the occasion. He stopped, listened till the crowing ceased, and then, with a look of surprise pulled out his watch. "Morning already?" he said. "My watch is only at 10. But there can be no mistake about it; the instincts of the lower animals are infallible." There was a roar of laughter. The "lower animal" in the gallery collapsed and Mr. Beecher was able to resume as if nothing had occurred.

Exodus From New England

OUT OF WORK AS RESULT OF MILLS SHUTTING DOWN.

As a result of the shutting down of numerous New England factories many Canadians temporarily out of work are going to Canada. Many of them will probably remain all winter or until the industrial situation is more promising. Those chiefly affected by the curtailment were employed in shoe shops, wooden mills, carpet factories and machine shops. The cotton mills which employed about 185,000, have not stopped much of the machinery. Should they do so, it is probable there will be a much larger exodus, a scally to Quebec.

TO BRING BUTTER FROM AUSTRALIA.

The surprising announcement made that a Toronto producer firm has engaged shipment of butter from England for domestic consumption. Particulars are being withheld, but it is stated on reliable authority that the city firm has engaged 500 cases of Australian butter for importation through an English house. One producer man spoken to said that he thought that this was quite possible owing to the high price at which Canadian butter was now being sold.

"During the summer of 1903 I was troubled with muscular pains in the instep of my foot," says Mr. S. Kerr, of Toronto, Ont. "At times it was so painful I could hardly walk.
