

upon the matter of thoracic pain and this symptom and that symptom, of which, perhaps, the patient has no experience during the past 30 or 40 years, granted that these patients were exceptionally intelligent, I think it would be difficult to find clinical evidence for underlying lesions. As to the clinical features at the time I think the clinician may be excused for having overlooked such things. Doubtless they were for the most part absent. I think we should encourage our young men in such work as Dr. Landry has brought forward tonight.

---