The Aetna Life

and The Mutual Life

[CHAPTER 7.]

We make no disparagement of the Mutual Life. On the contrary, it has to be a good company or it would not be fit to act as a measure for the handsome Cash Dividends for which the AETNA is famous. We have the figures of scores of ordinary companies, but the public would not care to look at them, the standing of the companies themselves being so far below the reputation held by the Mutual Life, the Equitable and the N.Y. Life. It is a good company that can do as well as those three great New York institutions. That's why we use their figures, almost exclusively, in showing what handsome results the AETNA has been able to produce. Now for an illustration:—
