

CANADIAN PUBLIC AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT
OTTAWA, ONTARIO

RELEASE ON DELIVERY
APRIL 11 1981

RE: [Illegible]
[Illegible]
[Illegible]
[Illegible]
[Illegible]

The situation in the Congo

Mr. President:

When this country's relations with the Congo were at their best, in an atmosphere of free exchange over the course of events in the Congo. There is no need for me to review the development of the intervening period. Some have suggested that some have been or otherwise disappointed in their expectations. Few have given much ground for such criticism or for optimism. It is true that an encouraging sign has been that it is possible to establish a basis for this state of affairs. It is possible to find a path leading to a lasting solution to the problems which beset the Congo and to a more equitable and lasting arrangement. It is possible to find a path leading to a more equitable and lasting arrangement. It is possible to find a path leading to a more equitable and lasting arrangement.

There are not a few who are still in the Congo. There are at least a few who are still in the Congo. There are at least a few who are still in the Congo. There are at least a few who are still in the Congo.

It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo. It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.

economic and technical assistance in which the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.

It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.

and alternative financing arrangements. It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.

and alternative financing arrangements. It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.

and alternative financing arrangements. It is my hope that the United Nations will be able to help you government and other states which have been understandingly successful, and have served the interests of the people of the Congo.