

CONTENTS.

xvii

PAGE	PAGE
1698. To	The privilege of self-taxation given up in 1665. The cessation
Ielena, and	of its other powers 507
chaplain on	Obnoxious spirit of the efforts made to regain them . . . 508
ed to learn	Their failure 510
. . . . 480	Its authority virtually suspended since 1717 511
nce 481	A lesson to be learnt by the Church of the present day, from Prideaux's	the history of these efforts 512
hop Wake. 482	Other evil influences at work in the last century . . . 513
2 484	The defective state of the law of marriage 514
. . . . 486	The state of society. Infidel writers 515
. . . . 488	Pernicious results 516
. . . . 496	Like influences at work in the Church of Rome 518
. . . . 491	And among English Nonconformists. The countervailing sup-
. . . . 492	port of the Church of England 519
nists. Re-	Increase of Churches in the reign of Anne 520
and 493	Queen Anne's Bounty. Lay Members of the Church of Eng-
. . . . 494	land 521
. . . . 495	The writings of her Clergy 523
Propagation	Rise and progress of Methodism. The Wesleys 526
. . . . 496	Whitefield 527
. . . . 497	Abolition of Episcopacy, and establishment of Presbyterianism
	in Scotland 529
	Severity of the Penal Laws against the Episcopal Church in Scotland 532
	Dr. Seabury, of Connecticut, consecrated by her Bishops in 1784 533
ENGLAND AT	Abrogation of the Penal Laws in 1792 534
NTURY.	Sympathy between the Episcopal Church in Scotland and our own 535
	The relation of the Church of England towards the Protestant communions of Europe 536
Church at	The Casaubons, the Du Moullins, the Vossii, and Horneck,
. . . . 500	connected with her, in the seventeenth century 537
ad in the	Special causes which afterwards led to closer relations between
. . . . 501	the Church of England and the Protestant communions of
. . . . 502	Europe. Sharp, Archbishop of York 539
. . . . 503	His zealous efforts to relieve the distressed Protestants of Eu-
. . . . 504	rope 540
. . . . 505	His correspondence with Jablonski, chaplain to the King of
. . . . 506	Prussia 541

VOL. II.

a