POLICE BOMB CRAZY

See Explosives Everywhere,
Just Like Inebriates Do
Snakes.

Special Cable to The World.
PARIS, May 9.—(Copyright.)—Christabel Pankhurst, who, from Paris, is conducting her weekly paper, The Suffragette, replies to The New York World's editorial of last Tuesday on the militant situation in England. The World said in part: "Indecision and weakness have now been followed by despotic practices that are even more mischievous."

Miss Pankhurst said: "The trouble is not that the government is weak, but that suffrage is so strong. Neither Home Secretary McKenna nor Premier Asquith is a merciful man. On the contrary, both are severe. Neither of them can be called weak, but we are so strong that the government cannot do anything more than it is now doing. But is not forcible feeding severe enough?"

Can't Be Extradited.

"I don't believe in the talk in British papers about the French government expelling me from the country for abusing their hospitality. My offense is political and therefore not extraditable. England always boasts of her protection of foreign political prisoners, so why should the English wish to lower France's standard of honor in such matters? England guards far worse criminals than I am."

"When the police raided our headquarters they got little or no incriminating evidence. My paper, The Suffragette, is going to appear right along, whatever happens. At the present moment the London police are bomb crazy and are seeing bombs just as delirium tremens patients see snakes."
