disease.

And what causes summer complaint, or cholera infantum, as this form of dysentery is sometimes called?

Usually impure milk, or impure water. The infant death rate in some big cities has been reduced by more than half, by the improvement of the milk supply. Therefore, the first thing to do for the baby, as the summer months come on, is to make sure about his milk. It is always of vital importance, but in summer, milk spoils so quickly that it is doubly difficult to get it good. If there is any doubt about your milk or water, pasteurize the one and boil the other, even for children 4 or 5 years old.

If a baby has diarrhoea, more than the normal two or three soft yellow movements a day, act promptly. Give him a teaspoonful of castor oil, and stop his milk, feeding him on strained barley gruel, and plenty of cool boiled is an analy all shall such as a many bratined being the content of the patient is in a rundown condition, as month and whose tuberculosis, because lung rest is the desideratum in such cases. Give him a teaspoonful of castor oil, and stop his milk, feeding him on strained barley gruel, and plenty of cool boiled water until the diarrhoea is checked, put him back on shis milk gradually, and increase the proportion of limewater by a tablespoonful for a day or two. If the baby is really very sick, with vomiting and frequent motions of the bowels showing green or bloody mucus, get a physician right away.

Pure milk, fresh air, sensible clothing and regular habits are the best guards against summer complaint. For children over one year, whose diet is varied, care must be taken to keep their bowels open, their food clean and pure, and not let them play in the hot sun in the heat of the day. A rest time, even if they will not sleep, should be insisted upon for an hour after the sidely meal.

The old fogy takes his cue from the charlatan's almanac. He even goes so far, in some cases, as to pull such decrepit jokes as "liver complaint"—if the patient looks a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney trouble"—if the patient books a trifle sallow or muddy—and "kidney in order to keep the pus from working into the brain. I have never heard of such an operation being successful and I dread it. .-Mrs. R.

Answer-Such operations are uniformly successful. The successful ones are routine, uninteresting, soon forgotten, especially by the patients. The occasional unsuccessful one is of news interest and everybody hears all about it, and it is not quickly forgotten. The operation is safer than the condition unoperated on. Chronic running ear (middle ear suppuration), is always a menace to life.
