Citizens turned out almost to a man to join in the celebration. The whole downtown section was thronged, and scores of impromptu entertainments were staged, in addition to the main one at the armories.

impromptu entertainments were staged, in addition to the main one at the armories.

Glamor was added to the gaiety by a pyrotechnical display unrivalled in the city's history. The bright lights of the downtown district were completely eclipsed by bursting rockets, Roman candles and flambeaux.

Military bands, bugle bands, pipe bands, fife and drum bands, added their strains, blasts, skiris and shrills to the vast roar of joy which commenced after 6 o'clock, and continued even when a blinding blizzard swept over the city. Torpedoes burst beneath the feet of the merrymakers with a frequency that suggested a bombardment. All the 127 different varieties of noisemakers joined in the din and any noise that might have been lacking was supplied by the lusty lungs of enthusiastic thousands.

Khaki Returns.

Military uniforms once more contributed their smart note to the streets. Ail branches of the service were represented by returned men, looking as spic and span in their fighting costumes as they did in the grim war days. Boy scouts, school cadets and the Naval Brigade added to the varlety, while scores of revellers in fancy dress completed the picture.

During the early part of the evening snow fell in just sufficient quantities to work into the general scheme of decoration, and to augment the showers of confetti with which laughing girls strewed the passers-by. Dundas street sidewalks were covered with the fine multi-colored bits of paper. Only the warm rays of the sun today will be able to sort the real snow from this artificial variety which fluttered down last night. Confetti was not the only thing used to add to the carnival asspect of the occasion. Ticklers were used to good advantage.

The parade, which commenced the celebration, was a complete success. Arrangements were carried out to the letter and not a hitch marred the occasion. Although the procession was nearly two miles in length, every section of it found its place without difficulty, as a result of the careful planning of those in charge of the celebration.

Fireworks.

Promptly at 7:30 p.m., a fireworks display was started at the armories, heralding the commencement of the march. Hundreds of colored balls of fire arched their way over the street, while blazing fiambeaux on the roof of the armories and other buildings in the vicinity, cast a glow over the whole scene.

Efficient co-operation on the part of the police department was responsible for no small measure of the success. The route of march was cleared of all vehicles with the exception of the street cars and the marchers had a clear path cars and the marchers had a clear path before them as they wended their way down Dundas street.

Mounted troopers of the First Hussars led the way closely followed by the band of their unit. They saluted smartly as they passed the reviewing stand ly as they passed the reviewing status erected in front of the city hall. Here were gathered Brigadier-General H. Panet and members of headquarters staff, Mayor Little, Lieut.-Col. C. M. R. Graham, Lieut.-Col. C. H. Reason and other returned officers, Gidley R. Taggart, An.erican Consul, ministers of gart, An.erican Consul, ministers of several denominations and other prominent citizens.

Members of the city council followed the band in automobiles. After them came a huge truck, loaded with cheering school boys and providing the motive power for a captured German gun. As each section of the parade approached the saluting base Roman candles were brought into play until soon the procession was moving under the maze of colored lights, stretching as far as the eye could see. Public school cadets formed an escort for the first gun.

Gun Escorts.

Then came another piece of the captured German artillery, escorted by separate school cadets. A third gun was escorted by a fife and drum band and high school cadets while a fourth was triumphantly surrounded by technical high school cadets and the Naval Brigade.
