There is one gentleman whose acquaintance I am going to orop.
It is the party, who, wherever he goes, makes love to the duning room girl.
The girl doesn't like it—she has her own lover, and doesn't want to be bothered with him. How many Dyspeptics can say that? Or perhaps you are dyspeptid own lover, and doesn't want to be bothered with him.

If she dared, she would ship him. But it would cost her her job. She is a poor girl who has to work for her living. And with splendid herpism, day after day, she endures the sloppy love-making of the amorous boarders. Spark a girl is to get her in a corner where it is good and dark; but to try to get next to a pretty girl in a big dhing room is an undertaking that I deplore. and don't know it.
