

OSCAR WRIGHT CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

Coroner's Jury Fixes The Guilt of Wm. C. McKnight's Death on Him - Killed in Wild Street Fight.

Surrounded with the bloom of an awful tragedy, and horrified at the thought that for the first time a murderer has been committed in their midst, the people of Havelock, Kings Co., are deeply mourning a terrible event which occurred in that peaceful village early Friday evening, in which one man lost his life, and another, his assailant, is lying in the county jail, charged with the serious crime of manslaughter.

In the course of a family quarrel, William McKnight was struck on the head with a heavy stick in the hands of Oscar Wright, and died twelve hours later, having never regained consciousness. Doctors tried to revive him, but in vain, and he died at 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

The constable replied that he had not. William Keilm, driver on the Elgin and Havelock railway, was some distance away when the affair happened, but he contends that he heard the blow very plainly and at once remarked that no man could live after receiving such an injury.

Charles Coates is employed as brakeman on the same road. He says that he does not think the blow would have been so serious if McKnight had been standing up.

Wright was arrested one hour after the fight. Constable Coates secured the assistance of Constables Herwood Fowler and LeBaron W. Corey and went out to make the arrest. He found Wright sitting on the furniture in front of his step-mother's shanty. When told that he was under arrest he asked leave to put the furniture away, but Oscar, who offered no resistance, and was taken to Constable Coates' house, where he was kept all night.

ried a Miss Alward, a sister of his brother's wife. To Jonah Keith fell the task of bringing up Samuel, and Chipman Keith. Mrs. Wright's first husband, went several years ago on account of trouble in the family, and is said to be yet living. It is said that Mr. Wright and his second wife did not get along very harmoniously, and that Mrs. Wright had her troubles to an intimate friend in the train coming to St. John a short time before his death.

THE FEEBLING AT HAVELOCK. Never before have the people of this quiet village been in such a state of excitement. As soon as it had been learned that William McKnight had been killed, and that his wife with her five small children were hysterical with grief, many sorrowful tears were shed. Old weather-beaten farmers, whose faces had grown stern with the problems of life, simply sat there and cried, and even the constables when talking to a representative of this paper were not ashamed of their tears that quietly made their way down their cheeks. "I saw the man who killed McKnight," said Constable Coates, "but I have never had anything to do with it. To see those five little girls, some of them scarcely old enough to realize what had happened to their father, was very distressing, I say nothing of the distress of his wife."

George W. Fowler is looking after the interests of the prisoner and J. M. McIntyre is acting for the family. The inquest was held on Friday, the 16th, at 11 p. m. to attend him. He was alive and unconscious until he was struck by the blow on the head. There was a swelling over the right ear on the side of the head. He had been bleeding at the nose, and a fracture at the base of the skull. A fracture in that region would be likely to cause a fracture of the skull. (Witness showed where the blow was struck.) "I think the blow was the cause of his death. The blow was made with a round smooth weapon.

DR. FLEMING. SUSSEX, Sept. 18.—Coroner O. N. Price summoned the following jurors to hold the inquest, who at once arrived in charge of Constable L. W. Corey. After the jurors were sworn in they proceeded to view the remains. The jurymen are: William C. Mann, Noah Mann, Titus Hicks, John Mann, George M. Fowler, Zephiah Saunders, Burton W. Taylor. J. M. McIntyre represented the prisoner and J. M. McIntyre is acting for the family. The inquest was held on Friday, the 16th, at 11 p. m. to attend him. He was alive and unconscious until he was struck by the blow on the head. There was a swelling over the right ear on the side of the head. He had been bleeding at the nose, and a fracture at the base of the skull. A fracture in that region would be likely to cause a fracture of the skull. (Witness showed where the blow was struck.) "I think the blow was the cause of his death. The blow was made with a round smooth weapon.

DR. PRICE. Dr. W. H. Price of Havelock was the next witness, who said: "I knew the deceased. Have been his family physician part of the time. Was called in to see him about 7 p. m. of Friday, the 16th. He was unconscious, blood oozing from his right eye and nose, bleeding at the nose. Breathing was very much labored. I found he had received a blow at the junction of the bone and back bone of the skull. There was no fracture of the skull. Swelling on right side of head. Blood evidently was made by a heavy round instrument. No fracture of the cranium that I could find in that region. The swelling was so large that it was hard to diagnose, but there was undoubtedly a fracture at the base of the brain. The concussion and weight of the blow caused his death. He did not lose enough blood to cause death.

C. A. COATES. Charles A. Coates was the next witness sworn. He said: "I live in Havelock; am a brakeman. I knew the deceased and Oscar J. Wright. I was shown the weapon which took place in front of the Wright shop about 6 p. m. I saw McKnight coming down Station street from his home. He came within three rods of the Wright house. McKnight went across the street towards the turn table, and I saw him in the up-stairs front window of the shop. I was below the shop on the opposite side of the street, 17 or 18 paces between the shop and McKnight came towards me. Wright came between the buildings. I ran across the road and said to McKnight: 'G—d—your soul, I will give it to you for looking for law,' at the same time making signs to pull his coat off. McKnight, holding up his sore hand, said: 'Leave me alone. I have got my hand hurt.' Oscar Wright said from the stair window: 'Give it to him, will you, Ira.' McKnight would not undertake to use a club in that condition.

THE COURT then adjourned for tea, when an evening session will be held. The Sun correspondent visited the spot where the tragedy occurred, and found the grass stained and some cordwood sticks smeared with blood. The funeral of W. C. McKnight, the victim of Friday's affray at Havelock, took place this afternoon and was largely attended, service being conducted at the Baptist church by Rev. George Howard and C. O. Peterson. There was little cross-examination. The jury were out one hour and five minutes and brought in the verdict that Wm. McKnight came to his death by a blow from a club in the hands of Oscar J. Wright and that the said Oscar J. Wright did unlawfully kill the said Wm. C. McKnight on the 16th day of Sept. inst. Signed by all the jurors.
