

By the Fountain of Eternal Life.

BY REV. C. H. SPURGEON.

"Joseph is a fruitful tree, even as a fruitful bush by a well; whose branches overflow with water."—Gen. xxxvii. 2.

"And of Joseph he said, blessed of the Lord be the land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath."—Deut. xxxiii. 13.

Dear friends, we long to have many converts; we count that church happy to which God adds daily of such as are being saved.

Many professing Christians are, I fear, very much dependent upon revival excitement, and the currents of godly society. But for the summer tide is over, where they ever? This is the great burden which every earnest evangelist has to bear.

Above all, it is a great blessing to be so rooted and watered, that you live graciously and uprightly, despite personal interest. There was a time when it seemed the loss of everything for Joseph to keep close to God.

First, this describes Joseph's character. He flourished near to God. He was an offshoot of the old tree, and he was rooted deep by a well which always watered him.

Second, Joseph retained gracious principles. There is a great difference between religious principle and religious passion. Many persons are religious by starts and fits.

Joseph showed his character through out the whole of his life. As a youth he dwelt very near to God, and hence he was forced to enter his protest against the evil conduct of his brothers.

If this brings me now to notice, under my second head, that this is of itself a great blessing. Moses, in my second text mentions "the deep that toucheth beneath," as having its form of blessing.

Dear friends, we long to have many converts; we count that church happy to which God adds daily of such as are being saved. But we are very much dependent upon revival excitement, and the currents of godly society.

At home the society of his father would nourish his piety, but he was just as gracious in the house of Potiphar. The degrading idolatry of Egypt did not make him unfaithful to the unseen God.

Another privilege comes of personal nearness to God; such men enjoy, and strengthen you in your situation. I have sorely grieved Him, and shot at Him, and hated Him.

A Quiet Influence. Many touching incidents illustrate the influence of the society which has for its badge, "In His Name."

In one of the large city stores a child served as cashier. One day, returning to the counter with the change, she was sharply reprimanded by the saleswoman for some fancied neglect.

Bits of Things. Straight on is the nearest way.—Frisian Proverb. Make life a ministry of love, and it will always be worth living.

A Great Event. In one's life is the discovery of a remedy for some long-standing ailment. The poison of selfishness is in your blood.
