

FOX DISCUSSES MAGIC LATHER WITH LOGAN THE BARBER, "A RAZORLESS SHAVE"

Has Become Well Acquainted with That Shop and Had a Number of Pleasing Talks with the Barber "on the First Chair."

Has Found it Expedient to Drop Bond's Restaurant but Patronizes Turner's Where He Told One of the Waiters that He Thought Boiled Periwinkles He Saw in the Window Were "Boiled Chestnuts."

FOX THE FUGITIVE
Both Eyes With Expression You Should Recognize.

FOX THE FUGITIVE
One Peculiarity in Mouth Fugitive Cannot Hide.

When the man who patronizes a good barber and finds out that he can go over that face with the gentle touch of a child he doesn't like to experiment with other shops.

And that is why I "rate to do it." Do what? Why tell of the confiding interest E. P. Logan takes in Fox the Fugitive—and "Doesn't know it." His shop is on Charlotte street near the Theatre.

It all seems safe enough, the day after day that I have planted myself in the chair of this skilled tonsorialist. But there is such a thing as going on too long where the rewards have accumulated as they are in this city.

Of all the sleuths that I have to look out for the barber is the most dangerous. He has every advantage for getting the best class of a fugitive's identity.

Under the masterful strokes of E. P.—I suppose him to be the barber whose sign appears at the door, the man on the first chair. Under his tender ministrations I fell into a half daze; wondering whether or not this barber had any suspicions of his customer—the man who he had been shaving so many times.

Finally I asked him a question that I thought would set him thinking. Had he ever heard of "Self Shaving Lather?" For a moment he made no reply. He turned his back to me, caught up a brush filled with creamy lather and giving his wrist a gentle swing like a pendulum touched the high spots with the careful application that a mother gives to her darling in the bath. Thinking he was not quite clear as to what I really meant in speaking of "Self-Shaving Lather" I added: "You don't need any razor. You spread the lather on your face and then in scraping off it brings away all beard down to the cuticle."

"Yes, I've heard of it," he said. Well, that was a good come back. Nor did I doubt his statement.

"Isn't it wonderful," I said, "Mix the powder with water, paint your face with it, then scrape it off!"

He admitted it is marvelous. But he was not prepared to endorse it. Naturally opposed it. He made an argument to explain why he doesn't approve of "Self-Shaving Lather," and discussed the subject intelligently and reasonably.

"Did you ever see any of it?" I asked. He came out of that Query all right. He said he hadn't. And so we discussed the subject pro and con. It seemed to me that one could save time and money. "Think of the utility of such lather," I suggested. "No atrop or razor required. Just the lather, a brush and the back of your comb. A razorless shave!"

Many a pleasant discussion of burning topics of the day have me engaged in since I landed in St. John. This fair complexioned, gentlemanly barber and Fox the Fugitive.

One day I took him into my confidence. I told him that I had come to town for the purpose of mobilizing the garden crops that are to be grown in the gardens of St. John and vicinity. I hadn't as yet been able to discover any. But was hopeful that the patriots of the city would find a dry and sunny spell when they could dig up their back yards, and sow their potatoes and plant their radishes.

I am not sure that at times a glimmer of suspicion cropped out in his thoughts.

But it is fair to him to say that never did a barber that harvested the crop in my face give me better satisfaction.

Now that Bond's have become wise to the fugitive they've been harboring I've had to find another place to eat though not a new place for me.

Over in Charlotte street between the Square and Union I've been patronizing the Turner restaurant.

By the way have you tried a Pharaoh or an Overland? A. A. McClaskey will pay you five dollars for either cigar that helps you catch the Fugitive.

Now Turner as people know who have been for some years back his steady customer, favors the simple life, dispensing food that is plain and palatable. And since he and his staff have been on various occasions feeding the fugitive it is evident they demand no credentials of patrons who come in there.

I don't think that either of his forces has any suspicion of me. The stout

NOTABLE ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT WILSON

Washington, June 14.—America is at war "in defence of our rights as a free people and of our honor as a sovereign government." President Wilson this afternoon stated why America is fighting, in a speech solemnly vibrant with warning of the blood and suffering the country must endure, but deep with the conviction that the nation's fight is right.

The president's address was a re-creation of flag day; it was a speech that stung in the bitterness of his arraignment of Germany—not of the German people, but of German autocrats. He pictured Germany's "military masters" in a sinister plot of years of incubation reaching out, corrupting, intriguing, scheming to drive their own people and master the people and powers of other smaller nations, to throw a broad belt of German military power and political control across the very centre of Europe and beyond the Mediterranean into the heart of Asia.

Austria A Dupe.

The president named Austria-Hungary as the dupe of Germany's autocrats, Bulgaria and Turkey their catapaws. He earnestly inveighed against any consideration of alleged German peace feelers put out now by those who, having set their net and reached the zenith of their domination now see their power slipping and their sinister plans about to come to naught.
