Under- Currents

By The Duchess

"But if he comes," says she, blanching, "if he should see me—"
"Leave all that to me," gravely "For this once at least, trust me!" She makes him no reply, but stands gazing moodily upon the grass at her feet. It seems to him as though she were trying for her own sake to conquer the distrust of him that is now so woven into her as to be part of herself.

"In the meantime you cannot stay here," he goes on quickly as though fearing to wait for her next words; "the night is cold and damp. There is the summer house over there," pointing in its direction "go and rest there till I call you."

Glad to escape from him, glad to hide from him her troubled face, Vera hastens to the shelter suggested, and sinking down upon the one seat it contains a round rustic chair in the last stage of decay gives way to the overpowering fatigue that for the last hour has been oppressing her.
Reluctantly she does this, and quite unconsciously. Obviously determined to right sleep to the last, she presently succumbs to that kindly trypant, and falls into one of the most end a slumbers she has ever experienced.

How long it lasts she never knows, but when next she opens her eyes with a nervous start the first flush of rosy dawn is flooding hill and valley and sea. Two or three youthful sunbeams, golden and glad with mirth, are stealing mischievously across the sand-floor of the tiny greenland house in which she is sitting as if to catch her unawares.

She has risen in a frightened haste, that, now she is more wide-awake, seems part of a dream. Yet had no one called to her? Her heart it still beating violently and it occurs to her as she looks round her that that strange calling must have been a merely visionary idea: she is here, and alone, and—

Something lying at her feet disturbs all her preconceived fancies.
It must have slipped from her when she rose with that nervous start slipped from her shoulders. Regarding it more earnestly, she acknowledges unwillingly that it is Saelon's coat, a light grey one; she remembers now, he had not been in evening clothes when first she saw him in the garden, and the very colour of the soft indistinct grey the coat has brings him back to her with a distinctness that has something distasteful in it.

When she was asleep, lost to all knowledge of friend or foe, then he had come and placed that coat across her shoulders—then when she could not refuse his pretended kindness when she was powerless to resist his hypocritical advances. Surely it was an intolerable liberty he had taken.

The coat lying there prone upon the ground seems to have an extraordinary fascination for her. He had stripped it from his own body, in the darkest the dampest hour of the night, to lay it on hers lest the chill of the keen air might reach her. It was a part of the game he had proposed to play, no doubt, and yet—and yet—

A curious light grows upon her face as she stands staring down upon this simple garment, and then with a sharp movement, as if angered with herself for her long absorption, she lifts her head and goes slowly toward the open doorway and stands there gazing uncertainly from right to left.

Her eyes are still large and languid with sleep, bright and unsteady, her soft hair lies ruffled on her low broad brow. She looks timidly nervously around her as one expecting anything but good, her whole air is shrinking and her whole self altogether lively.

To the young man standing in his short-sleeves half hidden amongst the laurels and looking at her, with admiration generously mixed with melancholy in his glance, she seems the very incarnation of all things desirable.
A certain miracle of symmetry.
A miniature of loveliness, all grace.
Summ'd up and cloven in little.
A swift hot flush dyes her cheeks as a sudden movement of her body betrays him to her. It was he then who through all the chilly changes of the night had stayed half clothed that she might escape the cold.

"Come," says he, hastening toward her. Half unconsciously he puts out his hand and takes hers as if to lead her the more quickly to the house.
She hesitates.

"Where—where is he?" she demands faintly. She has not withdrawn her hand from his, and as she speaks she lifts her large soft frightened eyes to his. He can feel that she is trembling and a sudden glinting sunbeam falling on her hair brings to life her ruddy tinge in it.

It is the first time she has ever used towards him so friendly a tone. There is almost a touch of confidence in both her glance and words, and a mad, glad unreasoning joy rushes through all his veins thrilling him for the moment.

"He is at the other end of the garden," he whispers back "You are safe if you will only—I ask you again—trust me.
Come, this way."

He presses her hand and hurries her over the short dewy grass into the shrubberies that form an effectual screen from all observation of those in the garden beyond, and so on until they come to the small oaken doorway through which she had passed last night, and which has proved more foe than friend.

Once inside the longed for portal, her first impulse is in a natural one, it is to run as fast as her feet will carry her to her own room. But when she has gone a step or two she pauses, hesitates, and then, decidedly, she goes looks back at him. Her whole air is full of irresolution, but at last—

"Thank you" she says, as forced by some hidden power into saying it, and having said it she stands stepping her foot in a shy, embarrassed, half-angry fashion against the stone flagging of the passage.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Mrs. Phillips Sends an Encouraging Letter to Expectant Mothers

West Philadelphia, Pa.—"I too Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for over a month before my baby was born and it has made me much better in health. I was always very ill when my other children were born, but with this compound I had a much easier time. He is a big healthy boy now, three years old, and believes it was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that made me so well. It is certainly a good medicine in its favor, and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. W. PHILLIPS, 6430 Kingsessing Avenue, West Phila., Pa.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such letters is that this famous old root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness.

For special advice in regard to such ailments write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its many years experience is at your service.

GIRLS! MAKE LEMON LOTION TO WHITEN AND BEAUTIFY SKIN

In all weathers the skin and complexion can be kept wonderfully clear, soft, and white by the use of this inexpensive lemon lotion which any girl or woman can easily prepare.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quart-pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months.

Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness, sun-tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoother and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quart-pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and hidden beauty of any skin. Those who will make it a habit to gently massage this lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands once or twice daily, may be repaid with a skin that is flexible and young looking and a peach-like complexion.

Says Acid Stomach Causes Indigestion

Excess of Hydrochloric Acid Sour
The Food and Forms Gas-Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents a complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fumes and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon.

Then we feel a heavy lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoon in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While rest follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.
Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.
