

Vice-President B. F. Macaulay discussed the plans for new construction at the University. For the second time in a decade, the University of New Brunswick is undergoing extensive development of physical facilities in order to accommodate the influx of new students expected in the years immediately ahead.

New Building Program moves into high gear

In an interview with Mr. B. F. Macaulay, Vice-President of U.N.B., this reporter received confirmation of the fact that another era of expansion is beginning on campus.

Mr. Macaulay elaborated on Dr. Mackay's words at the dedication of the O'Brien Gates, saying that the construction of both the new residence, MacKenzie House and our new Library will be underway by this spring.

MacKenzie House will be started immediately with the construction of the foundation this fall. This, Mr. Macaulay stated, would therefore ensure that the residence would be ready for occupancy by next fall.

When asked if this House would be similar to the others in the quadrangle, Mr. Macaulay said that it would be similar but that there would be a few new innovations — these being the inclusion of a squash court and a photography darkroom.

The one point of most probable interest to the student body was Mr. Macaulay's statement on the new library. "Good headway is being made on the planning with the architect" he said "and it is fairly well set that the tenders will be let in the spring"

The Library will be set at the point where lines from Kings College Road and the center of the Chemistry Building intersect and it will eventually be the largest building on the Campus. The plans call for it to be five stories high and ample space has been arranged for study halls and cubicles.

The only sad note on the Library construction is its completion date. Those students who are upperclassing will probably never have an opportunity to use it as the Library will be one year in building but when it is finished, few schools in Canada will be able to boast of a better structure.

Mr. Macaulay also mentioned a word for those who have been questioning about parking facilities and complaining about the mud lots behind Carleton Hall. These are only temporary lots as much of the land will be used for the new Library site. The paving that has been going on around campus by the government was not extended to these upper parking areas because of this reason, but Mr. Macaulay assured this reporter that once the Library is constructed, the situation will be remedied.

Therefore, have patience, ye drivers of dust-covered vehicles and wearers of mud-covered shoes, relief is in the right — paved parking areas will be situated around the Library.

THE VOICE OF UNB

Teachers college wants to remain Autonomous

After a report from the University Liberal Club that Teachers' College Students were being forbidden to join and taking part in their club and other University activities, the Brunswickian sent a man to get the story from Mr. Picot, the Principal of Teachers' College.

Mr. Picot explained that Teachers' College is not the same type of institution as is U.N.B. and S.T.U.; T.C. is a part of the Department of Education which decides all policy regarding T.C., and Mr. Picot is in fact an employee of that Department. For this and other reasons Mr. Picot explained that T.C. must retain its own identity and that integration of his institution and the University in any way is impossible. For this reason he is against our clubs actively soliciting members from the T.C. student body. He did say, however, that he had no objection to his students joining our clubs and participating in our affairs as individuals.

One member of the S.R.C. said "Since T.C. will soon be starting their own organizations and since their building is in varying degrees of construction and confusion, we can see Mr. Picot's point of view. We realize that setting

U N B wins pavemore award

by Bob Burrows

At an impressive but unheralded ceremony Sunday evening, Dr. Mitchell Pavemore presented his famous "Gold Tar Award" to the University of New Brunswick.

Dr. Pavemore, although usually content to remain as just a figure in the background, was present himself to confer the award.

The Brunswickian, as usual, was on hand to cover the event but Dr. Pavemore's reticence towards publicity triumphed and we were unable to take his picture. The accompanying photograph although, was taken of the "Pavemore Gold Tar Award".

In an interview with this reporter, Dr. Pavemore said that he had been on an extended tour of Canada and the U. S. comparing, testing, and walking on paving, and it was the news of U.N.B.'s mass paving. At this point in the interview though, his monocle fell earthwards and the remainder of our time was spent in fishing it out of the flush. Naturally, this was a great disappointment to us, since Dr. Pavemore is such a well known philanthropist and we felt sure that he would have had much of interest to say to the student body and especially to those connoisseurs of fine paving.

Dr. Pavemore was naturally travelling on a tight schedule and he left campus immediately after the recovery of his eyepiece, slightly tarnished though it was.

We sincerely regret the fact that we were unable to give better coverage of this once in a lifetime event but one thing irks us more — This was the almost complete lack of attendance at the ceremony.

What a loss to all those who missed it! This was in fact tantamount to missing such events as the Fall Formal, the U.N.B.-Mt. A. cricket match and the Brandywine Singers.

We have to admire Dr. Pavemore's control and aplomb as he addressed his audience of one. Finding no one to accept his award and only this reporter as an onlooker, he carried the ceremony off exceedingly well.

Naturally an imposing figure as he sat astride his customized cement roller, Dr. Pavemore was a man who will always remain in our memories, a man that I am personally proud to have known!

Dr. Pavemore left us, perhaps a bit saddened at this lack of recognition shown to him but he exited as the man of the world he is — riding calmly towards the rising moon, slowing occasionally to let a pedestrian out of his way, but rolling always onward.

He is a great man — too bad about his monocle though — perhaps that is why the O'Brien Gates were so badly damaged.

A preferential tariff agreement exists between Canada and South Africa. In South Africa a police state exists, in which one can be jailed for any or no reason, for unlimited periods. Opponents of the apartheid racial policy are attacked by the government and are subjected to severe tortures and persecution. The Canadian Union of Students passed a resolution condemning this activity and calling for a student support of a boycott of South African goods. For an authentic picture of the South African situation (necessarily anonymous) turn to page 3 for a story exclusive to the BRUNSWICKIAN.
