

blood of Calvary, have afforded covenant opportunity to the human race from the beginning until now.

II.—GOD'S COVENANT WITH MAN HAS IN EVERY INSTANCE BEEN MADE AVAILABLE FOR THE FAMILY.

Every sin and sorrow on this blighted earth is evidence that the covenant was "made with Adam, not only for himself, but for his posterity."

That the covenant of atonement by means of sacrifice was available and adequate for parental hold, is proved by the cases of Noah and Job.

When Noah was about to take possession of the emptied earth, we see him gathering his family about him, and offering to God the most complete sacrifice it was in his power to offer. Not one lamb, nor seven lambs, but one representative of each of the clean beasts. (That must have meant one of each of the animals allowed of God for sacrifice, for animals were not heretofore given to man for food.) This was evidently meant to be the most complete sacrifice possible.
