Alford, Mrs. Fanny, (Alford), a cousin of Very Rev. H. Alford, to whom she was married in 1835. 1. Reminiscences by a Clergyman's Wife. Edited by the Dean of Canterbury. "The simple and loving record of a happy, industrious, and holy life. It is no doubt impossible for a near relative to form any but the most partial and imperfect estimate of the public or literary career of a dear husband or parent, or of the exact value of his labours when compared with those of others toiling in the same field. Mrs. Alford's good sense has prompted her to delegate this portion of a biographer's task to persons who were better able to accomplish it. . . . Every other qualification for the office which she had undertaken Dean Alford's widow possesses to the full."—Sat. Rev., xxxvi. 25.

Alford, Very Rev. Henry, D.D. [note, vol. I. add.] 1810-1871, was Vicar of Wymeswold, Leicestershire, 1835-53, when he removed to London, and was minister of Quebec Chapel, Marylebone, till 1857, when he was appointed Dean of Canterbury. He had a high reputation as a preacher, and was an active and liberal churchman, maintaining friendly relations with the leading nonconformist preachers. A man of varied accomplishments, he had also an extraordinary power of sustained work. In addition to his labours in Biblical research and literature, his earnest parish activities, and private tuition, he wrote hymns, composed vocal and instrumental music, painted in water-colours, and contributed in prose and verse to periodicals. He was the first editor of the Contemporary Review, established in 1866, and contributed largely to its pages, as also to Good Words and other periodicals. A full list of his writings, including single sermons and printed, and articles in magazines, &c., not yet published, and in the Appendix to the Life by Mrs. Alford, supra. The following list of books, omitting pamphlets, completes that given ante, vol. I.:
