QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

POLYURIA.

Mare has been out of condition for a year. She has inordinate thirst, drinks large quantities of water, and voids large quantities of urine of a very clear color. W. M. G.

Ans.—She has a disease of the kidneys called polyuria, or diabetes insipidus. Feed on food of first-class quality, and give her one dram iodine dissolved in a pint of warm water (not hot), three times daily, until her thirst becomes normal and her urine voided in normal quantities and quality. V.

AILING BULL.

Bull had lump in his throat last spring, but it has almost disappeared. Occasionally a green fluid runs from his nostrils. His sheath and penis have been swollen for three months, and he cannot serve. There are ulcers on sheath and penis. D. R.

Ans.—It would be well to have your local veterinarian attend to this bull. The condition may be serious, and probably contagious. I would advise dressing the ulcers, once daily, with butter of antimony one part, tincture of myrrh two parts. Apply with a feather. The application of hot poultices to the sheath, suspended by a wide bandage, will have a tendency to cause the swelling to subside. Inject the sheath, twice daily, with a warm solution of sulphate of zinc, three drams to a pint of water. V.

ABORTION.

Four of my cows have aborted. I know of three of them having received injuries which might have caused the accident, but know of no cause for the fourth. Twelve other cows are, apparently, all right. One, due to calve at full term, and one calved at full term, about two months ago. I am white-washing the stable, and have sprayed the aborted cows with a solution of mercury bichloride, 1 to 1,000. R. J. C.

Ans.—It is probable all the cases of abortion were accidental. I would advise the use of the bichloride solution on all pregnant cows, but would use it half the strength, viz., 1 to 2,000; heat it to 100 degrees Fahr. before using. If any discharge is taking place from the aborted cows, inject a little of the solution into the vagina, once daily, until it ceases. Give each aborted and pregnant cow a small teaspoonful of carbolic acid, mixed with a pint of water, and sprinkled on food, or as a drench, twice daily. It would also be wise to inject the bull's sheath, once daily, with the solution, for a few days. If any more abort, burn fetuses, afterbirths, etc., and continue the use of the solution and carbolic and do not breed the bull to any more cows for at least six months. V.

MISCELLANEOUS.

1. I have an imported Clydesdale mare that I want to breed next spring. I have a choice of two stallions, one is a splendid horse, but his sire and the mare's sire are by the same sire. The other stallion is no relation to the mare, but is an inferior animal. Which sire would you advise me to breed my mare to?

2. Three-year-old colt, fed on 1½ quarts each of bran and oat chop, and 1 quart shelled corn, three times daily, has semi-diarrhea. I want to fit him for spring work. What would you advise?

3. Mare aborted twins at seven months. Her foal, seven months old, was still nursing. Do you suppose this caused abortion? A. J. S.

Ans.—1. Breed to the good horse. The relationship is not sufficiently close to make it advisable to breed her to an inferior stallion rather than to him.

2. Feed one gallon of whole oats, three times daily, and add to his drinking water one-fifth of its bulk of lime water.

3. While it would have been wise to have weaned the colt at five or six months' old, especially when the dam was again pregnant, the fact that the foal was still nursing did not cause abortion, unless it was very rough, and hunted the mare severely when nursing. No doubt the mare received an injury of some kind. V.
