CHOP FEEDS

(Experimental Farms Note)

The term "chop" or "chop feeds" is a general one used to denote a class of feeds which are essentially oat products. Mill feed, cattle feed, oat feed, moulee chop are common names for these feeds used by the local grist mill, while some of the larger mills put out this product in quantities under specific brand names. Certain of these feeds consist entirely of crushed or ground oats, others consist almost entirely of the by-products of the oàt meal mill (including oat hulls) while others contain a certain admixture of corn, barley, etc. They are extremely variable in composition. The Commercial Feeding Stuffs Act, under the administration of the Department of Inland Revenue does not require any registration of chop feeds nor any guaranty as to their percentages of protein, fat and fibre. However, the "Adulteration Act" has established a standard of quality for certain grain products and it states that Chop Feed is whole grain of one or more kinds more or less finely ground, and contains not less than ten (10) per cent. protein, not less than two (2) per cent. of fat and not more than ten (10) per cent. of crude fibre." All chop feeds not carrying a guaranty as to nutritive value (minimum percentages of protein and fat and maximum percentage of fibre) ought to conform to this established standard or be considered adulterated. The correspondence of the Division of Chemistry during the past year has contained many complaints regarding these chop feeds. In certain cases it was stated the feed was refused by all classes of stock and only eaten with repugnance after being mixed with bran or middlings. In any other cases, persistency in feeding the material resulted in the death of swine, calves and poultry, apparently partly from starvation and partly from digestive disorders brought on by the low nutritive value of the feed and its coarse, fibrous nature. A few samples of these feeds respecting STICKNEY'S which complaints had been made, were collected in Ontario, Quebec, and British which complaints had been made, were Columbia, and submitted to analysis in

While it is not claimed that these analyses were typical of chop feeds as sold generally throughout the Dominion, it is highly significant that not one of the seven samples examined contained the minimum percentage of protein required by the standard, that they were all exceedingly low in fat and that they with one exception contained an excess of DIRECT IMPORTER AND RETAILER fibre three of them over 20 per cent. Taken as a series they were of extremely low feeding value and several of them were practically worthless.

These feeds ranged in price from $20 to $35 per ton. In a few of them there was a sprinkling of corn, but in the majority of them the proportion of meal was very small; they were all coarse and fibrous, indicating that they had been largely made from light oats or contained a heavy admixture of oat hulls, mill waste and other worthless offal. Some of them contained a number of weed seeds, fragments of straw, etc. There is no wonder that stock refused them. Indeed it is well nigh impossible to imagine how they could be used profitably, if purchased at any price.

Ground or crushed oats from good quality grain make a nutritious feedthough for young pigs and calves the hulls should be sifted out. While not a high-protein concentrate, it possesses nany excellent qualities as a basis of the meal portion of the ration. Of all the cereals, oats are the most readily and successfully Igrown throughout Canada, and there is no reason why the progressive farmer with foresight should not be independent of these purchased chop feeds. With a grain grinding mill on the farm, there should be little necessity to buy chop. There are many excellent feeds on the market, the price of which is more or less n accord with their nutritive value. These should be bought, rather than chop feeds, to supplement the home grown feeds and fodders. At the best, chop is but a low-grade feed. If necessity occasions the purchase of the chop, careful examination of the proffered feed is important; unless finely ground those con-
