But equally fine was his speech to French-Canadians at Nicolet a few days before, with this impressive warning:

What Belgium is and Northern France, what Serbia and Poland have become, we may be to-morrow.

This is the question of the hour, the only one. The most solemn hour in the history of the world has struck.

Thousands of miles from her a grim game is being played, with the world's destiny and our destiny at stake.

Mr. Blondin, like others who have gone before, had slurs cast against his sincerity and his patriotism.

EDOUARD BLONDIN, PATRIOT

Hon. P. E. Blondin's answer to those who charged him with disloyalty is to offer his services to King and country on the field of battle. It is an answer that is characteristic of the man and entirely in keeping with the fine spirit of patriotism that has distinguished his conduct since the first day of the war.

But like John J. C. Abbott, who, after signing in his youth a manifesto for annexation to the United States, became a Prime Minister of Canada; and a British Knight, and like Thomas D'Arcy McGee who from being a Young Irelander in 1848 became the warmest advocate of British rule in Canada, Mr. Blondin has shown that he has heart enough and brains enough to advance a good cause when the good cause calls.

Another of Brantford's well known sportsmen and athletes has finished his inning and answered the call of the Empire from the great field, in the person of Pte. Charles Wilkins, 164,207, a former member of the 84th, word of whose deed in action at the front was received on Saturday. Pte. Wilkins was popular throughout a very wide circle of friends in this city, being prominent in the local cricket club, and his passing upon the field of honor, will be regretted by many.

He was of the finest type of manhood, English by birth and unimpaired, residing on Huff Ave. He was an employe of the firm of Messrs. P. H. Secord and Company. Pte. Wilkins enlisted here in the summer of 1915, joining the 84th battalion through the medium of the 25th Brant Dragons. His next of kin resides in England.

The Churches and Social Needs

By J. S. WORDSWORTH, Director, Bureau of Social Research of the Three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

CHANGED social conditions in Canada demand changes in church organization and methods. A quarter of a century ago the population of Canada was largely homogeneous, agricultural and rural. To-day the population of Canada is heterogeneous, increasingly industrial and urban.

Under modern conditions even the country demands co-operative effort. The farmers are realizing this and have organized extensive financial and social co-operative enterprises. The educationalists are beginning to realize it and to establish consolidated schools. The churches lag behind. They are still attempting to cover the field with denominational agencies. The result is overlapping and inefficiency.

Especially is this true of Western Canada, where the population is composed of such diverse elements. Even interdenominational co-operation as now attempted does not meet the case. We think of a town in Northern Manitoba with a population of some five hundred, consisting mainly of Canadians, Old Country English, Half-Breeds, Iowlanders, Ruthenians and Poles. What provision is there for the religious needs of this district? A Church of England student, fresh from the old land, comes from the next town every Sunday morning to conduct a service in the school-house for a little group of a dozen people. A Roman Catholic priest visits the district about once a month to conduct mass and baptize the children. A Lutheran minister pays a visit to the Iowlanders about once every six months.
