NO EXCUSE ALLOWED

A Busidess man Learned in Youth a Maxim Which was Invaluable.

t was "Never to Lose Anything and Never to Forget Anything"-Forgetting is a Lazy, Carless

A successful business man told me there were two things he learned when he was 18 years old which were ever afterwards of great use to him-namely, "Never to lose any-thing, and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it.

suppose I should lose it, what then shall I do?" "You must not lose it," said the lawyer, frowning "I don't mean to," said the young

"But." inquired-the young man

"but suppose I should happen "But I say you must not happen to I shall make no provision for such an occurrence; you must not lose it.' This put a new train of thought into the young man's mind, and he found that if he was determined do a thing he could do it. He made such a provision against every contingency that he never lost anything. He found that equally true about forgetting. If a certain matter of importance was to be remembered, he pinned it down on his mind, fastened it there, and made it stay. He used to say: "When a man tells me that he forgot to do something, I tell him he might as well have said, 'I do not care enough about your business to take the trouble to think of it again.' I once had an intelligent young man in my employment who deemed it sufficient excuse for neglecting an important task to say, 'I forgot.' I told him that would not answer; if he was sufficiently interested, he would be careful to remember. It was because he did not care enough that he forgot. I drilled him with this truth. He worked with me for three years, and during the last of the three he was utterly changed in this respect. He did not forget a Master of the Situation. In the days of slavery Abram was great favorite with his master, whom he served as a valet from his youth. At his master's death his mistress granted him many privileges, and at the period of emancipation he resisted every temptation to leave the old plantation. In the exercise of his privileges he became obnoxious to the other negroes, and their frequent complaints excited remenstrance on the part of his mistress. But Abram pursued his own way in spite of expostulation. Finally, his interfer-ence with her own plans exhausted the patience of his mistress, who de-termined to dismiss him. "Abram." said she one day in a very kindly "I see that you and I cannot live in peace on the same place, and I have decided that we must part— Abram exclaimed, 'Law, Mistis, whar you gwine? You ain't gwine! git no bettah plantashun than dis; take ole Abe's advice, Mistis, en stay right whar you is."

How His Fars Must Tingle.
