CHEAP GROCERIES!

CHEAP GROCERIES!

Old lady, above whose declining years hung the threatened Damocles sword of heart disease, of the mpty exchequer, the clamoring creditors, the pitiful straits to which they were reduced?

"What shall I do?" she asked her self, as she went slowly back to the kitchen of the ruinous Gothic cottage, which they had obtained for a ridiculously low rent because it was ruinous.

"I've borrowed of the rector's wife twice, and I'm ashamed to go there again, and I've sold everything I can laby my hands on. But," glancing up at a picture which hung in the hall beyond, "there's the Velasquez still. A Velasquez is always worth money. Belle will scold about parting with it and Aunt Leah will mourn, but we can't live on air and dew like than Aunt Leah will mourn, but we can't live on air and dew like than Aunt Leah will mourn, but we can't live on air and dew like the soft.

To her amazement, our heroine Chesus, "I'you thought I could be of use," if you thought I could be of use," if you thought I could be of use," if you thought I could be of use, "I'yo use of slight and small. Besides," looking closer at her, "you are too slight and small. Besides," looking closer at her, "you are lady." "But I know how to clean house, for all that," said Saidee, valiantly. "I'yo use a lady." "But I know how to clean house, for all that," said the eld lady, "you are too slight and small. Besides," looking closer at her, "you are lady." "But I know how to clean house, for all that," said Saidee, valiantly.

"But I know how to clean house, for all that," said Saidee, valiantly.

"Come in, and have a cup of eoffee with us. I am Mrs. Hartwice.—and this is my daughter Kate."

"Saidee use, looking closer at her, "You are lady." "Come in, and have a cup of eoffee with us. I am Mrs. Hartwice.—and th sofa.

To her amszement, our heroine recognized one of her schoolmates, katherine Hartwick, who had graduated in the same class with her at boarding-school two years ago.

"Bruner, the artist, this afternoon, and ask him to get us a purchaser. Poor people such as we are can't afford to retain old family relics." And so, when Aunt Leah was indulging in her afternoon nap, and Belle, the beauty of the family, was ironing out the flounces of her white muslin dress for the morrow's picnic, valiant Saidee climbed on a chair, took the unframed picture down (it was the head of some old Spanish grandee, with a stiff-pointed ruff and an evil leer in the eyes), wrapped it up a newspaper and crept across the meadows with it to be willage.

M. Power was in his studies of some very, very poor! So now you know all about it. And when I have eaten my breakfast, if Mrs. Hartself.

crept across the meadows with it the village.

Mr. Bruner was in his studio, a grizzle-headed, blunt old gentleman, in a belted linen blouse and a faded velvet cap. He nodded kindly at Saidee, who had once taken a few lessons from him, but when she displayed the canvas he shook his head.

"How much do you think it is worth!" asked Saidee, wistfully.

"Nothing!" said Mr. Bruner.

"But," cried the girl, "it's a Velasquez!"

"That a Velasquez!" said Mr. Bruner, contemptuously, "My dear, bruner, contemptuously, "My dear, it is who will about it. And when I have eaten my breakfast, if Mrs. Hart-wick will give me a cleaning cloth give he at leaning cloth and plenty of soft scap I will show you what I can do."

So that Miss Lynn was mounted on a stepladder, polishing of an antique mirror, when Kate's soft voice was heard saying:

"Oh, Harry, is that you? We supposed of course you were at the pienic. Miss Lynn, this is my breather Harry. Harry, let me present you to Saidee Lynn, my dear old schoolmate, who has come here to help us clean house."

and a wretched one at that!"

So Saidee tied up the poor picture and went home again, shedding a few tears as she walked under the whispening trees.

All. Harry Hartwick inclined his head.

Saidee paused and looked at them, not without interest.

"Let's make it," said Mr. Hartledown From the property with the property delightful than this day among dust, whitewash, scouring-sand and brooms.

"I wonder who our new neighbors are to be," she thought.

Just then out trotted a stout, cherry-cheeked old lady, with her cap all on one side and a worsted shawl tied over her shoulders.

"Oh!" said she; "are you the young woman who disappointed us yesterday about cleaning?"

"No," said Saidee, crimsoning to her temples.

"In sorry to say that I cannot, answered Saidee; and she vanished beyond the lilac hedge, rather amused at the mistake which the old lady of you could possibly ceme to had made.

"My, dear you have more than earned it," said the eld lady, "and if you could possibly ceme to morrow—"
