DIRECTIONS

For the Guidance of Electors in Voting. Each Elector on entering the room where the poll is being held, shall declare his name, surname, and addition.

After so doing he shall receive a ballot paper in the above form.

Each elector, if required by the Deputy Returning Officer, the Poll Clerk, one of the Candidates, or one of their agents shall, before receiving his ballot paper, take an oath of qualification.

The voter is not to vote for more than six candidates as Councillors. After receiving the ballot paper the voter shall go into one of the compartments and with a pencil, there provided, place a cross in the divisions containing the names of the six candidates for Councillors for whom he intends to vote thus—X.

The voter will then fold the ballot paper, so as to show a portion of the back only, with the initials of the Deputy Returning Officer and hand it so folded up to the Deputy Returning Officer, and the Deputy Returning Officer shall, without unfolding it, ascertain that it is the ballot paper which he furnished to the elector, and then immediately place it in the ballot box. The voter shall forthwith leave the Polling Station.

If a voter inadvertently spoils a ballot paper, he may return it to the Deputy Returning Officer, who will give him another.

If a voter votes for more candidates than he is entitled to vote for, or places any mark on the ballot paper by which he can afterwards be identified, his vote will be void and will not be counted.

If a voter takes a ballot or ballot paper out of the Polling Station, or fraudulently puts any other paper into the Ballot Box than the paper given him by the Deputy Returning Officer, he will be subject to punishment by a fine of five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for a time not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour.

A BURNING PRISON. DESPERATE ADVENTURE IN A STEAMER.

An exciting incident occurred at Sunderland on Saturday afternoon when a man and a youth were confined in a veritable death-trap on board the steamer Lavinia Westoll. The vessel was under repair at Messrs. Austin's shipyard, and the plates were being renewed in the fore-peak. This is a compartment which can be made watertight and airtight. Four men were employed on the work, two on the outside of the compartment—one in riveting the new plates and the other in heating the rivets; while the other two, a man named Peter Mills and a lad named John Patterson, were working inside. It was Patterson's duty to catch hot rivets thrown down through the manholes and hand them to Mills, who put them through the rivet holes and then held them while the riveter outside hammered them tight.

About half-past two a rivet not intended for the catcher, but falling accidentally from another squad of workmen, came through the manholes and fell into a heap of tarred oakum, which burst into flame. The two men outside easily escaped, but Mills and Patterson were trapped inside.

The only means of egress was a series of manholes from deck to deck, and these now served as a funnel for a dense volume of smoke, which rose high into the air and was seen by thousands of people. A fire alarm was given; and within a few minutes the brigade arrived. Several men attempted to pass down through the manholes to the rescue of the prisoners, but the dense volumes of rising smoke made this impossible.

The compressed air tubes which work the pneumatic tools were then pushed up against the still open rivet holes of the plates, and the air was thus pumped into the peak. The fire brigade played on the outside of the plates to keep them cool, and the holders of pneumatic nozzles—Patterson, a brother of the imprisoned boy, and a plater named McDermott—were in a continual torrent of water, but stuck to their posts.

It was decided that the only way to release the imprisoned man and boy was to cut through the plates. An inch of solid steel had to be pierced. One man held the cutting tool all the time while eighteen others, worked with heavy sledgemoles, worked in relays of three.

Boy's agonised voice. The two prisoners could be heard tapping at the plates, and the words "Furry, hurry," the agonised voice of the boys, were audible. Those outside shouted, "Keep your heart up, Peter," but the noise of the hammers drowned their voices.

The work of cutting the plate was extremely quick; yet seventy minutes elapsed from the outbreak of the fire till a complete aperture was made and the two prisoners were hauled through the hole.

Mills, looked, his comrades declared, ten years older. Patterson on getting into the open air had a violent fit of weeping and then collapsed and was carried home. Mills related how he had to encourage Patterson, who would have been suffocated if Mills had not held him by force to the holes through which the air was being pumped. What most concerned Mills was the fear that the fire might reach the wooden ceiling of the fore-peak, which in that case would have fallen in.—Daily Mail, May 30.

Reindeer in Alaska. From United States Government Report Just Received. The report for 1909 shows the beginning of the use of all the reindeer for the benefit of the natives. There is scarcely one surplus reindeer in the hands of the Government. New stations have been established, native herders, at much cheaper rate, have replaced the Lapps. So that many more apprentices could be afforded. Salaries have been paid largely in reindeer. The enterprise has reached a new level. There is a very large increase in the number of natives altogether outside the service who have been buying reindeer as an investment. Sale of reindeer products without the value of the skins used for clothing or meat consumed as food by herders is $26,270, against $9,543; $18,212 was divided among the natives. This shows that the reindeer industry has become one of the most prominent factors in the economic life of the natives. The benefits derived from this rapidly increasing income are almost incalculable. Five new Government stations have been started and eleven new herds established. There are now 18 Government stations and 10 Mission stations. The Government herds have decreased more rapidly than in any previous year, showing that they will be soon private deer. It is very important to increase the number of apprentices to whom to turn over the reindeer; in this way the natives of Alaska now own 49 per cent. of all the reindeer of the country. The number of private owners is now 230, an increase of 146 in the last two years. The total number of reindeer is now 22,915. The total appropriation of the Government to the herders for their own herds is $15,000. The total number trained for sledge driving is 11,273; 860 are being trained and there are 200 trained drivers. Two stations sold reindeer to over $1,000 worth last year. The superintendents of education are skilled reindeer men and superintend the service, as are all the Government teachers in their districts. No apprentice is allowed to become a herder till he is proficient in reading, writing and arithmetic. The whole experiment is proving an enormous uplift to the natives that still seems impossible in any other way. We are ourselves in Newfoundland this year sending home the last three Lapp herders and are replacing them by North Newfoundland and Labrador apprentices. While we are transferring a large part of our herd to Labrador by steamer. Believe me to remain sincerely yours, W. T. GREENFELL. The Government Station, St. John's, Nfld., June 18th, 1910.
