Those Attacks on the King.

From every standpoint, and particularly from a constitutional one, the partisan journals and partisan poliattacks on the King are reprehensible. The supposed leanings of the as a grave outrage in our system King for and against Home Rule are Parliamentary not legitimate forms of political controversy. Unionists and Home Rulers are both to blame in trying to utilize the King as a protagonist of views absolutely at variance. The King should be kept out of the poli-He is exalted by the Constitution above partisanship. #### Asquith's Statement.

In spite of the message received in town yesterday and again this mornponed his statement over Friday, the ostponement appears to have been only till a later hour in the day. Mr. Asquith made his statement in the ons at five o'clock yesterday, after a Cabinet Council meeting, to which Sir John French and Sir John Ewart were summoned. On his arrival at the Commons Mr. Asquith the story of the resignation two chief military members the Army Council. It proves that our surmise of yesterday was correct They did not, as was alleged, in th despatch yesterday, resign on the grounds of any differences of views as to the duty of Officers and Soldiers in the Army, but on account of the false position they had been placed by the political head of the Army Council. In good faith they had cooperated in giving the memorandur of the Secretary of War to the re calcitrant officers. They then found they had been misled by Col. Seeley whose action had not the sanction of his colleagues in the Cabinet, with the exception of Lord Morley. In good the pledge to General Gough and the recalcitrant officers, and the Cabine nad disclaimed it as out of accord with the views of the Cabinet. The new order issued by the Army Council clears up some issues. Summed up shortly these orders are to

(1) No member of the Army is t be asked by his superior, or is a superior to ask, what he will do in a future hypothetical

(2) It is the duty of every member to obey lawful commands to safeguard property, to aid the

Neither the civil powers nor nilitary powers are a law to themselves. All must obey the ordinary The Cabinet, the Secretary War, and all the authorities mus conduct themselves according to the ders of a superior, however exalted, is a sufficient answer for obedience to a command which is not sanctioned by the ordinary law. There is no special administrative law which puts either a Government or its officers civil or military above the law; and t is this principle which protects itizens against tyrannical and arbirary acts not sanctioned by the law But while it does so, it places the Army men in the awkward position of having to bear the consequence of obedience to a command which may be declared by the Court to be illegal and of disobedience to a command which may be recognized by the the Court as legal. Of course there are orders which any men can recognize at a glance as manifestly hich may be doubtful. In such a damages amount case the man on the street would not blame a soldier for obeying the order of his superior officer.

Destructive Fire This Morning

Nail Factory Completely Gutted-Damaged Estimated at $20,000-Insurance About $10,000.

At 5.30 this morning the Central and Western Fire Companies were called to the St. John's Nail Factory is supposed to have been smouldering all night, had assumed alarming proportions, and though they labored egal or illegal; and there are others assiduously for nearly two hours resulted from the blaze which apparontly started in the centre of

> The fire was first noticed by Isaac Barrington, of the sanitary staff, who promptly notified the Western Company, they summoning the Central by When the firemen arrived on the scene dense clouds of smoke issued from all parts of the building and if there had been any wind the houses in the vicinity would stand in langer. Three streams of water were lirected on the blaze, which shortly after the errival of the firemen burst out in all directions, making the struggle a desperate one. The water supply was good, but the fire had gained such headway before being 10ticed that the task of coping with the flames was a rather difficult one The firemen, nothing daunted, fough the flames admirably, and succeeds in confining the fire to the centre o the building. But for the corrugated ron roof of the building the fire would have been of a far more seri out nature. The flames were eventually overcome and the firemen com-pletely drenched returned to their halls about 7.20 a.m. DAMAGES. The estimated damages by fire and water is said to be in the vicinity o $20,000, which is only half covered by insurance. The machinery is no damaged to any great extent, neither is the building, compared with the loss of stock, of which a large quan city is totally destroyed INSURANCE.

The total insurance carried $9,550.00 as follows:— Building, $2,100, as follows-In perial. $500: National. $700: Royal, $900 Royal, $700: National, $1,100 and Liverpool and London and Globe
