WHAT THE UNITED STATES, GERMAN, AND ITALIAN PAPERS SAY ABOUT MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S STATEMENTS.

Mr. Lloyd George's determined warning to neutrals and his affirmation of our determination to defeat Germany has brought out in a remarkable way the world's confirming opinion that Germany is doomed to suffer one of the greatest defeats in history as the result of one of the greatest national crimes.

See how the world approves of Britain's decision. See how furious is Germany as she realises the disaster which she has brought on her own head and for which she now blames Britain.

"Mr. Lloyd George's stern reminder comes as a veritable bugle-blast of freedom," says the Montreal Herald. "The Germans' day of judgment is now dawning, and those who attempt to prevent execution of that judgment are traitors to mankind."

UNITED STATES IMPRESSED.

"The interview with Mr. Lloyd George has created the greatest impression in the United States of England's determination to pursue the war to its appointed end," says the New York correspondent of the Daily News. "The greatest display was given to the interview by the newspapers throughout the whole country. It was the most prominent feature of the day, and in this city the Sun and Mail, and the World printed it on the front page with eight-column headlines. The other papers were not far behind these in displaying the interview."

"The United Press telegraphed it to President Wilson at his holiday house at Ashbury Park. The President and Colonel House, Mr. Wilson's former envoy to the various European capitals, who was with him at the same time, read the interview with the greatest interest."

"I understand that the War Minister's words have confirmed President Wilson's opinion that it is useless to intervene or attempt to offer his good services, and incidentally the interview strengthens the President's position, enabling him the better to resist the constant attacks of the hyphenates and well-disposed would-be peacemakers who persistently demand that he proffer his services for peace."

"A deep impression has been made here by the widespread publication of the statement made by Mr. Lloyd George to the United Press correspondent, in which the reason why we cannot consider peace was lucidly explained," says the Times Washington correspondent. "By our friends the declaration is regarded as timely. It will help the President to withstand the new German peace campaign."

"Mr. Lloyd George's statement has quite dispelled the illusion fostered by the German-printed papers here that 'everybody is praying for the United States to take a hand in stopping this stupid war,'" says the Telegraph's New York correspondent.

THE ANGRY HYPHEN.

"The unpatriotic Staats Zeitung—the New York German paper—reveals without any attempt at concealment how bitter is German-American disappointment at the British War Minister's notice to the world to keep their hands off. The Staats Zeitung says: 'We are to accept the words of the British Secretary for War as an ultimatum to the country to close its lips to all peace suggestions at a moment when half the supposedly civilised world is creating upon the European Continent a wilderness, whose population, supposing the war can be indefinitely continued, must become one of withered manhood.'

"We are at a loss to see the unneutrality of calling both parties to a green baize council table in order that Europe and the world may be spared the ultimate horrors of a war fought to a knock-out."

"We have certain interests, too, concerned with the termination of the conflict. We, too, do not want the ghastliness of this war ever re-enacted upon the earth, and to that end may it not be the duty of this country, as among neutral nations must pertain, to voice the sentiments of peace?"

"Germany regards England as her most dangerous enemy," says the Brooklyn Eagle. "She is right. English money has largely financed the war activities of France and Russia, to say nothing of the small Powers. English ships have closed the German ports, kept the seas open to Allied commerce, including military supplies, and moved armed men by the million to the battle fronts. England has sacrificed the flower of her manhood and millions of treasure in a war which her diplomacy labored desperately to avert in the closing days of July and the first days of August, 1914."

NO NEUTRAL WOULD VENTURE.

"President Wilson, by his moral failure to be honestly pro-anything, even pro-American, as the Lusitania affair testifies, has earned the dislike and distrust of ardent pro-Americans, pro-Germans, and pro-Allies in equal degree," says the New York Evening Sun. "He would lose nothing, therefore, by a desperate attempt to better his candidature by a peace Note to Great Britain. Whether he contemplated such a resort or not we shall never know. Mr. Lloyd George, by awakening speculation as to such a possibility, has killed the possibility."

New York Sun: "With the third winter of the war approaching, Mr. Lloyd George says robustly that the fight must be to a finish. The Allies with superiority in effectives and at the very least equality in resources, would not be likely to consider any modification, however liberal, of the German terms of February, 1915. In the circumstances no neutral would venture to tender its good offices to restore peace."

INTERFERENCE ONLY BY INVITATION.

"The occasion for the British War Secretary's warning is not exactly clear, as forced intervention would be out of harmony with the duly declared policy of this nation at the outset of the war," says the New York World (Mr. Wilson's chief supporter.)

"The United States has not had and does not now have any thought of interfering except as its good offices are invited on behalf of peace by the chief belligerents with rational proposals promising the permanency of peace."

"Mr. Lloyd George has always been a hard hitter, and his vigour of utterance does not fall him when he expresses resentment at talk of peace before Germany is thoroughly beaten," says the Philadelphia Ledger. "Mr. Lloyd George makes it only too plain that the President's desire to play the role of harmonizer has provoked suspicion not gratitude."

"He who is not for us is against us—that is the easily understood attitude of the Allies. 'Strict neutrality' in the face of the issues in which the principles of human freedom is involved does not appeal to them as to those who roll 'he has kept us out of the war' as a sweet morsel under their tongues."

THRUST OF BRITISH PURPOSE.

"The grim determination of Great Britain to make no half-hearted use of its new-found strength could have had no better exponent than the stout-hearted Welshman who is now the British War Secretary," says the New York Evening World. "If Thiepval and Cambes needed any commentary, Mr. Lloyd George furnished it."

"All the push and thrust of British purpose, confident at last after long months of lying low and getting ready, can be felt in the vigorous phrases of the War Minister."

"Such a spirit perhaps sufficiently excuses the impatience and resentment with which the War Secretary treats the suggestion of a peace move from neutral quarters."

SOME GERMAN OPINIONS.

The Kolnische Volkszeitung fastens on Mr. Lloyd George's remark about neutrals who now whine because Germany is getting hurt, whereas they shed no tears when British troops bore the brunt of German superiority, and declares that it knows of no such neutrals. "Unfortunately," it says, "we have for a long time been obliged to face the fact that outside our own allies there are very few in the whole wide world who would not be delighted to see Germany's defeat."

"There is something frivolously satanic in this seeking, openly and formally as a sport, the murder of a highly-cultivated nation of seventy millions. Let it be so. It is bitter, but wholesome, to know this truth. It is a question of life or death for the nation. Therefore the solution must be war against England, war with all means. Our equipment at sea is going on well, and our brave bluejackets are burning to gain fresh laurels."

"Germany has neither decided to fight to a finish nor did she desire to fight at all," the Frankfurter Zeitung says. "Germany would have been really glad if her neighbors had left her in peace to pursue the peaceful kultur work, but she had to draw the sword because Russia and her ally, France, supported by Great Britain, left no other possibility but humiliation or war. Mr. Lloyd George's assertion is particularly audacious, because he, like all Europe, knows perfectly well how very much German statesmen tried to avoid war with Great Britain and to facilitate her neutrality."

"Germany will fight to the end, with all her strength, and all confidence."

The Munitions Crisis in France.

(Morning Chronicle.)

France, as well as other nations of the Entente Alliance, had her troubles with munitions, in the first year of the war. The curtain has recently been lifted by M. Robert Pinot, who is Secretary of the Committee of French Ironmasters. In a lecture before the School of Political Science he discloses how acute the crisis was, and incidentally furnishes additional evidence that France, as Britain was unprepared for, and hence, did not desire war. On the 17th of September, 1914, General Joffre told M. Millerand, the Minister of War, that the army had practically exhausted its reserve of shells for the 75's. The daily production at that time was 13,500.

General Joffre demanded that it should be immediately increased to 100,000. French industry was utterly disorganized. On the day of mobilization, all the metal workers of military age, all the engineers, all the heads of establishments left their work to join the colors. The works were left with terribly depleted staffs, and were completely thrown out of gear by the loss of their heads; so much so that in certain districts far from the war zone the factories could not be kept going and the furnaces were blown out. Even the arsenals lost much of their staffs and had to reduce output.

Then came the invasion and the occupation of the industrial regions of the north and east. A German authority in January, 1915, estimated that the invasion had paralyzed the defence of France. The output of the iron mines was reduced by 90 per cent. To make matters even worse, only the armament works had the special hydraulic presses for making the 75 shells.

How France solved her problem is perhaps less interesting than another inquiry. It is fairly plain, as the Manchester Guardian thinks, that "the French General Staff made a grave error when it mobilized the munition workers and when it made provision for only a small reserve of shells. The root of this mistake lay in its whole conception of the war of the future. Orthodox military thought in France held that the war would be short. It would be decided by a big battle, or perhaps a few big battles, in which on the French side (and presumably on the German also) only the army reserves would take part. That is the thesis which Jaures attacked in his 'New Army.' Events have fully justified his criticisms and his forecasts. Even in this world of experts there is still room for the man of genius."

When Rheumatism Strikes the Heart It Kills—"Nerviline" the Cure.

Effect of Nerviline on Chronic Cases Is Almost Magical.

Exposure to wet or cold is apt to bring on an attack. The muscles stiffen, the joints swell, and exertion brings on excruciating twinges.

Often the pain shifts from one part to another, and this is dangerous, as the heart is apt to be attacked. Death as a rule follows a heart attack.

The pain of rheumatism is quickly rubbed away with Nerviline. This is a swift, lasting and safe way to cure rheumatism. You can depend on Nerviline. It has the power, the penetrating force, the control over pain that is so essential to a rheumatic remedy.

Lots of testimony to prove Nerviline's certainty to cure.

The following letter is from Mr. E. G. Sautter, Port of Spain, Trinidad: "Last year I was severely troubled with rheumatism. I had it in my arms, shoulders and knees. The pain was at times excruciating, and laid me up so that I couldn't work. I went to Smith Brothers' Drug Store and was advised by the manager to use 'Nerviline.' That was excellent advice. I used Nerviline as directed and was cured, completely cured of every trace of my old enemy."

Once you use Nerviline you'll realize it's different from all the others—that it contains something that gets right "at" the pain the minute you rub it on. The large 50 cent family size is the most economical—get it today, or else the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere.
