CHAPTER IX.

"Don't argue the point, Clifford," he said, quickly. "If she prefers it, that is reason enough. Let us speak to Mr. Browne." Clifford Revel stopped him with a such of a finger. "Wait. I'm awfully sorry. How is it that you didn't tell Miss Temple before?" "Because, like an idiot, I forgot it," he said, regretfully. Clifford Revel looked grave, and glanced at his watch. Lela looked from one to the other, pale and troubled, but with no trace of fear or suspicion. Clifford Revel put up his watch, and shook his head. "I am sorry, very sorry—seeing that I am, in a measure, responsible for the arrangements—but it is impossible to alter them now."

Long afterwards Lela remembered that downcast face, with its thin lips and lowered lids, and remembered, too, that never once during the ceremony were the keen, hard eyes visible. With deep, grave voice, without hesitation or faltering, Nagle read the service, his eyes fixed on his book, even during the pause when Lord Edgar put the ring on Lela's finger; then, having finished, he closed the book and stood with folded hands and tightly-closed lips. Clifford looked up. He was as pale as death; but a smile fringed itself on his face. "Let me be the first to congratulate you, my dear Edgar," he said, holding out his hand. Lord Edgar, pale too, but with a glow of happiness in his eyes, turned to Lela. "No," he said, "my first word must belong to her—my wife," and he took her in his arms and kissed her. Then he took Clifford's hand and shook it. "Thank you—thank you, Clifford! Lela, my wife, thanks you, too, do you not?"

A Minister's Evidence.

There has come to use recently these two letters from prominent men who bear unquestionable testimony in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment as a prompt and lasting cure for piles. These men give their evidence freely because they know what it means to suffer from the tortures of piles and then be cured. They feel it a duty and a pleasure to let others know how they, too, may be cured. Rev. Frank N. Brown, Methodist Minister, Parryville, Ont., writes: "In the winter of 1912 I was stationed in Cobalt. I went for a snowshoe tramp one day, and sat for only a few minutes on a cold stump waiting for some comrades to catch up to me. From sitting on the damp stump I contracted piles, and suffered so severely that it caused me great pain to walk. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, and immediately purchased a small box, which very rapidly effected a cure. I always keep a box on hand and it is excellent for any kind of wound or sore." Mr. W. B. Thorne, J.P., Alderside, Alta., writes: "It was twenty-eight years ago that I became acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment and would not be without it on any account, as it never fails to do its work. I was first induced to try it for piles. Less than one box cured me, and I have never been troubled since. That was twenty-eight years ago, so I think the cure is permanent. It is good for sore lips and hands, chafing and, in fact, all sorts of sores. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of others." You can put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test in any case of piles with the utmost assurance that you will obtain relief from suffering and ultimately lasting cure. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. LONDON. LONDON, March 25, 1918. SIR GEORGE ALEXANDER. Sir George Alexander's management of the St. James's Theatre was one of the brightest chapters of recent theatrical history in London. It is no exaggeration to say that he did more for the British dramatist than any other manager of his generation. The fact that he produced "Lady Windemere's Fan" and "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" would alone keep his memory green. He brought forward many other original plays of merit, but those two made the St. James's for a time the best and most talked of theatre in London. Following the vogue of "Mrs. Tanqueray," his policy underwent a change. He went in strongly for the dramatic drama, producing "The Prisoner of Zenda," "If We Were Kings," and "Old Heidelberg." These plays earned him a lot of money and added to his personal popularity; but as a set-off his personal popularity, its distinctive of the St. James's; its distinctive of the St. James's. From time to time Sir George returned to the modern drama, and the old glamour could not be re-created. The later Pinero plays, however, "The House in Order" and "Robert Ross," "The Donna" took the town by storm; but with all its attractions it was not more than a melodrama played in the quiet style of the drawing-room. It may not be generally known that Sir George has within him the seed of introducing Bernard Shaw to the large theatrical public. In the more adventurous days of his management he almost promised the author to produce "Candida"; but for some reason he changed his mind. He had carried out his intent the subsequent history of the St. James's might have been very different, though perhaps not so financially prosperous. As an actor Alexander was always refined and interesting. He would have been the last to claim of imperiousness; but he had had charm of style and technical skill. Violent emotions were quite outside his range. SUGAR CARDS FOR THE JUDGES. The Ministry of Food will be requested to inform the House of Commons what arrangements are made respecting the rations of sugar to His Majesty's Judges on circuit; and whether they are placed on the same footing as commercial travellers, and immediately on arrival at an assize, are obliged to go to the local post office to enter their names and rations as in the case of commercial travellers. It was Mr. Pickwick's solicitor who dwelt on the importance to a suitor of the foreman of the jury having had a good breakfast, and the idea of being tried before a judge who had been deprived by the Food Controller of sugar in his morning cup of tea is too painful for an ordinary law-abiding citizen to contemplate. THE CAPITAL'S EARLIER HOURS. The social historian in the future, when he is dealing with the London of our time, will note as one of its most striking features that the process of ending social entertainments

Gin Pills SUCCEEDED. Where Travel and Change of Climate Failed to Restore Health. Hamilton, Ont., Apr. 10th, 1917. "About four years ago I was afflicted with Neuritis and inflammatory Rheumatism. I tried many remedies and my efforts through travel and change of climate in many parts of Europe were of little avail. I was in a state of extreme nervous prostration and was unable to do any work. I was advised to try your Gin Pills and I did so. I took a few doses and I feel like a new man. I feel in advancing years a tendency to be nervous and I feel that your Gin Pills are a great help to me. I have recommended them to my friends and they are well known as a commercial traveller of over forty years' active service." (Signed) W. G. REED.
