

REGAL FREE RUNNING Table Salt. Snow and Slush—dampness again! It makes no difference to you.

For Love of a Woman; New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER XXXIV. "I, TOO, AM FREE." "No!" he exclaimed, and the blood rushed to his face.

"Why, Doris? You must answer me! Is it because—oh, no! you can't have remembered—and yet—You are still Doris Marlowe!"

"Tell me, Doris; tell me again!" he exclaimed, passionately.

"My name is Neville," he said, haughtily.

"Percy Levant slowly and gently drew Doris's arm within his.

"So I imagined, my lord," he said, not sternly or haughtily, but with a calm, almost judicial gravity.

"I caught up the wine bottle and a glass and strode back to the carriage, filled with that weariness and despair which renders every moment of existence almost unendurable to the galley-slave and convict."

to his lips. If he had seen a ghost instead of sweet Doris Marlowe, he could not have been more completely unmanned and upset.

"It is too awful!" she said, irritably. "Pray hurry them on, Cecil. I am sure those horses must be rested by now."

THE APPROACH OF THE SHADOW. Heaven only knows what complexion Cecil's thoughts took during the journey, but he was graver and grimmer than ever when he got down at the door of the villa to help his affianced bride to alight. "The marquis's wife received them with surprise, tempered by satisfaction. "I am glad you have come, my lord, though I did not like to take the responsibility of wiring for you. The marquis is much worse. Oh, yes, decidedly much worse. He is asleep just now; but it is quite as well that you came." "I will see him at once," said Lord Cecil. "And I, too," said Lady Grace, slipping her arm within his. The valet led the way upstairs. The old man was lying apparently asleep; but as Lord Cecil bent over him he opened his eyes, and after a few seconds said, in a feeble voice and with the old, cynical smile: "Oh, it's you, Cecil, is it? And is that you, my dear?" turning his eyes in the direction of Lady Grace. "Yes, it is I, dear marquis," she murmured. He started. "Oh, Grace, is it?" he mumbled. "I thought it was she." "She? Who, dear marquis?" she demanded. He smiled. "No matter. And so they have sent for you, have they? They think I am in danger. You have come on a fool's errand, both of you. I'm grimy—I don't mean to die yet, Grace." "Oh, I hope not! Pray, don't talk of anything so dreadful!" she responded, with a false smile. "Why, you know," and she bent lower, with a fine affectation of modesty, "you are to dance at our—our—wedding, dear marquis." "Ah, yes!" he said, wearily, and with none of the enthusiasm she had expected. "Yes, yes, of course. You are going to be married—you and Cecil. Yes, I remember. I'll make haste and get better. In a day or two—" His eyes closed, and he turned his face away. "He may last for weeks, months, even years, my lady," said the doctor, of whom Lady Grace made enquiries with a scarcely concealed impatience. "Marvellous constitution, you see, and with care—" And he waved his hands deferentially. (To be Continued.)

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN. Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others! If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only sick imitations. Look for the "Bayer Cross!" Then it is real Aspirin, for which there is no substitute. Aspirin is not German but is made in America, and is owned by an American Company, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government. Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacturing of Monoaceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid. The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.
