Careers at Sea

Until recent years the only occupation that a woman could find at sea was that of stewardess. With the development of ocean transport, however, other and perhaps more attractive posts have been opened up.

A matron of a ship has an interesting position which only a capable, intelligent, tactful, and broad-minded woman can occupy. There are many important and difficult duties to fulfil, and any woman who undertakes such a task must be prepared to submit herself to routine and discipline which are far more rigorous than in hospital or in office.

While there are as yet comparatively few of what might be called "higher grade" posts open to women at sea, there are many opportunities for qualified stenographers and typists. In those boats which are fitted with a swimming pool and bath of various descriptions, a swimming instructor is often included in the "ratings," and the woman hairdresser has become a familiar figure in the most up-to-date liners.

The Ship's Conductress.

All Canadian passenger ships are bound by law to carry a conductress. The Canadian Government has decreed that no unaccompanied woman going to the Dominion to enter the field of domestic service shall travel by a boat that does not carry such an official.

The duties of a conductress, as explained by one who has been in the Canadian service, are to see that every woman has her necessary papers in order, to give her any help she needs, and really to act as a welfare worker. She has no fixed hours, and work on the outward voyage may be very heavy. But she travels under excellent conditions, for she has a small office, as well as a cabin of her own, and has quite a definite position on board.

Explosion in Boy's Mouth

DURING AN OPERATION.

At the inquest at West Ham on Laurence Henry Sims, 16, of East Ham, it was stated that when cycling in Upton Park, E. he collided with a motor car. He was conveyed to hospital, where it was found that his jaw was fractured.

Dr. J. Keith Davidson, of Queen Mary's Hospital, Stratford, said that in the course of an operation on the jaw it was necessary to use warm air to keep Sims' teeth dry, the air being applied by means of a dental syringe. Ether and oxygen was the anesthetic employed. On the third application of the warm air an explosion occurred at the back of the boy's throat. Acute hemorrhage followed and Sims died within ten minutes.

Doctor's Theory.

Dr. Percival Cole, Harley-street, W., who performed the operation, said that after the explosion the apparatus used burst into flames. During the war 1,800 cases of the sort passed through his hands, and what was done in this case was merely routine work. Ether was very inflammable, but there was no naked flame near. The explosion, in his opinion, must have been due to a mixture of vapours. The teeth were smeared over with alcohol, and had afterwards to be made perfectly dry, otherwise the dental cement would not adhere.

Dr. McDonnell, the anaesthetist, stated that in 1,200 cases he had never encountered anything similar to what had happened in this case. The jury returned a verdict that the boy's death was due to accident.

Land of Optimism

Canada is the land of optimism, and the Canadian does not understand the British habit of always harping on what is wrong with the country and never lightening the picture by dwelling on the lighter side.

This matter is well summed up by what a prominent Canadian said as we were leaving Montreal: "It was the British pioneering spirit that built up Canada. Surely that spirit is not dead. Get busy and show us that you can still be pioneers and lead the world in trade and commerce."

"You have the ability to do so if the will is there, and if the spirit of the country is right."

Rod and Gun

(The November Issue).

The Kennel Department of the November issue of Rod and Gun, the Canadian hunting magazine, contains a notable feature in an article on the Canadian field trials of bird dogs from the pen of A. F. Hochwalt, who may be said to be the greatest field trial authority on the American continent. The winter feature Along the Trap Line, edited by M. U. Bates, commences its season in this month's issue and contains a full synopsis of the trapping laws for the season 1925-26 all through the Dominion.

The first of a series of splendid cartoons on the humorous side of out-door life, by the famous James Frise of Birdseye Centre fame is also a good new feature.

The November issue might be called a hunters' number, from the amount of hunting interest it contains. An Old Timer's Story of Hunting in the Rockies is a real old timer's yarn, written in a care-free style that marks the man of the open and interests his fellows. In Breezes from the West, A. Bryan Williams, the well known B. C. sportsman, strikes the same note that is felt in all the stories and regular features of the magazine.

St. Paul's Tapestries

Girls were hoisted in cradles to a height of 50ft. to arrange the red and blue tapestries which have been hung over the wooden screen which divides the part of St. Paul's Cathedral under repair from that open for services.

The concealment of the bare wooden boarding by these draperies has greatly improved the appearance of the interior.

Made in France, the tapestries stretch for a width of 16 feet above the temporary altar and reach to the top of the wooden partition.

A new crimson altar canopy, worked with fleur-de-lis and cross symbols, has also been placed in position.

Orders for Britain

TWO IMPORTANT AUSTRALIAN CONTRACTS.

Two important Australian contracts have just been obtained by British engineering firms. An order for 19 large transformers of approximately 3,000 kilowatts capacity has been given by the Victorian State Electricity Commission to Messrs. Johnson and Phillips, Ltd., of Charlton, S.E. The contract price is between £25,000 and £30,000, and the work will take about 9 months. The order was secured against the competition of a number of other firms, principally Swedish and American.

The New South Wales Government Railways and Tramways Board has placed an order with Messrs. Babcock and Wilcox, Ltd., for two coal elevators capable of handling 40 tons of coal an hour, for the new power station which is being erected at White Bay. The plant is to be erected at the company's works at Renfrew, and the work will occupy about 4 to 5 months. The London, Midland, and Scottish Railway, says Modern Transport, has awarded the Wellman, Smith, Owen Engineering Corporation, Ltd., of Darlington, Staffordshire, the contract for the manufacture and erection of a mechanical coaling plant for the Pol-matic locomotive depot, Glasgow.

Nottingham City Council has accepted the tender of Messrs. John Booth and Sons, Bolton, amounting to £466,754, for building 1,000 steel-frame bungalows.

Women Who Look Old

In many cases they are not old in years, but because they are overworked, over-tired, nervous and run-down, ailments have developed peculiar to their sex and this condition makes them look years older than they actually are. Such women should consider the remarkable record held by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a recent canvass among over one hundred and twenty-one thousand women who had used it, ninety-eight out of every one hundred women reported benefit from its use, health and happiness.
