I the early part of the campaign these see seats were regarded as Conservate, but as a result of the splendid ght put up by the Liberal organizations in these ridings, there is every bestbility that they will be landed in the Liberal column.

Two, of these ridings, and it need not be at all surprising if all three go Liberal owing to the strong support given by the ladies.

Sizing up the situation in the whole province, there is now no question about the general result. The Sitton government will be sustained by a large majority. Giving the Conservatives every doubtful seat, they cannot capture more than 26 seats in the whole province, and it would not be at all surprising, when the ballots are counties liberal column.

Bassano MEETING

Arthur D. Foster asked if Mr. Mackenzie considered the banks were treating the west unfairly and how.

Mr. Mackenzie thought they were. The banks collected deposits. They were sent east and used to help finance the big corporations in the east.

Mr. Foster wanted to know if the banks did not loan more to the farmer than the farmer deposited. The witness did not know. He insisted seven per cent should be the right rate. It should not be higher.

The Machinery Collector

Mr. Green told of his troubles with banks andy implement men. He had expected a loan from the bank on his grain; it was refused. The implement people were hot. They sent a big bull dog of a fellow to him who bull dozed him, suggested that he was dishonest and called him everything outside of "heli."

"He must have taken you for a politician," suggested some one.

physical impossibility. Most farmers must hold; it was usually the man less able to stand it. Parliament should thus take steps to assist the farmer by encouraging him to build granaries and hold his grain.

Mr. Green read with approval his opinion that head office inspection was valueless and that the only thorough inspection was of all the branches, no matter how many, because there might be impropriety at branches, or collusion. Government inspection was would loan to any one they did not loan to now, if this clause was inserted.

Mr. McKenzie said that banks might not avail themselves of the privilege but it would not hurt to give them a chance. Because they are safe, sure and trouble-proof. "It would not be a boon, but it would be a decided advantage," replied Mr. McKenzie.

"Would you enthusiastically endorse this proposal?"

"I am heartily in favor of it."

Dr. Warnock asked if he thought banks would prefer be loan on live stock rather than grain. Mr. McKenzie thought they would. He would include live stock in the clause. Anything which would encourage farmers going into mixed farming would be of advantage to the West.

Banks and Mixed Farming

W. H. Sharpe asked if banks were not now encouraging farmers to go into mixed farming.

Mr. MrKenzie had not heard of it.

Mr. White asked if he thought a secret lien would prejudice other creditors.

Mr. Mackenzie said no doubt business interests would object. He did not think the storekeeper would be injured. He saw no advantage of having a revision of the bank act too frequently.

"Now, are you sure of that?" said Major Sharpe. "Would not the cost be increased by such keen competition?"

Mr. Green did not think it would make any difference. They all ran on the general basis. Mr. Green said he favored the establishment of a bank backed by the Dominion government. He would give power to levy a tax as security on advances. He thought and they were half at a dozen banks and they were half at dozen banks. They keep

C. J. Thornton inquired what the winness thought of the evidence of the wise to make a hard and fast that Western farmers borrowed too much.

Mr. Mackenzie thought those who were willing to pay high rates were usually speculators. Mr. White pressed the point home as to whether there should be a hard and fast rule as to the rate.

"There should be a line drawn somewhere," replied Mr. Mackenzie, "A farmer who pays more than a loan is better off without the loan."

"What are the mortgage rates" isked Mr. White.

"Seven, eight or nine per cent," he epiled.
