BARKWELL'S BRONCHIAL BALSAM.
Dear Sir,—I wish to testify of the merits of that grand preparation known as Barkwell's Vegetable Healing Bronchial Balsam. I was told by a neighbor that a grand Balsam it was. My little girl was very ill with bronchitis, and a very few doses restored her and I believe saved her life. I feel it my duty to let others know that they also can be cured of this terrible affection.

tiguous to the village, sold off everything the day of arrival. Mr. Ewart and family have the sympathies of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

The Young Liberal.
The full rehearsal of the Young Liberal Minstrels held last night at the practice rooms was productive of considerable progress in the bright new musical selections and specialties which are being introduced.
Prof. Roselle Pococke wielded the baton and at the conclusion expressed his pronounced opinion that the performance on Feb. 6 will outdo the one of New Year's night. The stage settings, as well as the show itself, are to be changed. The next full rehearsal will be on Wednesday evening next. The club are being favoured with pleasure to a street parade one night next week to the residence of a patron in A Londoner Married.

One of those pleasant little affairs that form, as it were, an oasis in the humdrum of every day life took place yesterday at the residence of Mr. D. Kerr, Catharine street, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Aggie Kerr, daughter of Mr. Daniel Kerr, to Mr. John P. Dunn, of London. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. A.
McKay, Woodstock, the bride being attended by Miss George Williams, Mr. D.
Kerr performing the like duties for the groom. The wedding was a quiet affair; only a few guests outside immediate relatives were present. At the close of the ceremony the party sat down to an elegant dejeuner prepared in honor of the occasion, after which the bridal party left for a trip to the States, via New York, Washington and other eastern cities. The handsome and valuable presents of the bride testified of the high place she holds in the estimation of her friends, and we join in extending our congratulations.—[Ingersoll Chronicle.]

Rosina Vokes on Monday.
At the Grand Opera house next Monday evening that charming little comedian, Rosina Vokes, with her clever company of English comedians will appear in three separate and distinct pieces. The performance will commence with "Crocodile Tears" (new), a comedieta in one act, adapted from the French, to be followed by G. W. Goffrey's delightful comedieta, "My Miller's Bill," in which Miss Vokes will sing her famous song, "His Art Was to Deceive," concluding with "My Love in Livery" (new), a farcical comedy in one act, written especially for Miss Vokes by S. Thayer Smith. The plain opened to-day and is being well taken up.

At the Grand.
The production of "The Burglar" at the Grand last evening deserved better patronage than that which was accorded.
"The Burglar" is a bright little four-act comedy-drama by Mr. Geo. Thomas, and was put on by a carefully-selected company of artists, each of whom handled his or her part in a thoroughly satisfactory manner, and with no inconsiderable amount of artistic appreciation. The plot of the piece differs very little from that of many similar dramas, but is unfolded more slowly and skillfully than some, the audience being in a state of uncertainty until the last word in the last act. The piece embraces some of the wisest and freshest dialogue that has been heard at the Grand this season, and provoked continuous laughter and applause.

Miss Sydney Armstrong, in the character of Mrs. Leeward, gave a very pleasing performance, rendering that part, showing the depth and devotion of a true woman's love for a worthless husband. Miss Gladys Rankin Drew gave a pleasing portrayal of the light-hearted and matrimonial-seeking maid, though the lady was suffering from a cold. Mr. Sidney Drew, in the character of the self-possessed law student of aggravating coolness, carried everything with him, and was in fact the light and life of the evening, showing himself to be in the front rank of comedians. The rest of the company were all acceptable in their several parts.

Matters Matrimonial.
A Delaware correspondent writes as follows: Despite the rain, mud and mire, and the great banks of heavy fog that have made of late traveling in the country so difficult, and which might be expected to interfere with the more nocturnal locomotion over the miserable roads of the times, actuated by gallantry and the old adage that it is not good for man to live alone, Mr. George Yarnum, a young farmer of Westminister, has met these impediments to courtship bravely, and went regularly some ten miles to the township of Delaware, to see the lady of his affections, Miss Minnie Howlett, a pretty, vivacious damsel, and a general favorite of society, and as a legiti-mate consequence made her his wife on Wednesday, Jan. 15, at the hour of 10 o'clock, at the residence of her father, Mr. John Howlett, where a large company of relatives and friends congregated, and the ceremony performed by the Rev. Mr. Andrews, Methodist clergyman of Lambeth, though not under the most favorable auspices, the day being so much rain being anything but favorable for the occasion. The bridal dress was simply-fashioned of cream-colored silk, the front being bordered with costly white lace, and altogether made a most graceful appearance. The bridesmaids, Misses Vanstones, were attired in pink, blue and yellow sari silk. Mr. Edward Bolton acted as the groom's best man. A sumptuous dinner was prepared by the bride's mother, to which simple justice was done by the happy crowd. The presents were numerous and costly. Mr. and Mrs. Vanstone left the same day on an extensive bridal trip east.

The Evangelists.
The services now being held by Crossley and Hunter in the Queen's Avenue Methodist Church are not as largely attended as they desire. Last night the body of the church was two-thirds full. The meeting commenced with singing and prayer. Mr.
Hunter made a few preliminary remarks, in which he excused the absence of the local ministers, Messrs. Scott, Murray, Couricou, Langford and others, being confined to their houses through illness. Mr. Crossley dis-coursed chiefly upon the death of Paul, taking as his text, II. Timothy, iv, 6, 8:

"For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

The words were written by Paul shortly before his execution. The cheerfulness and even gladness with which the great apostle met his death was a lesson to Christians to follow his example.

People were too apt to think only of the grave when on their deathbed. They should think only of the home which as Christians is their heritage in the world to come. Paul described his death as a voyage to the happy haven, and we should welcome it as a relief from the burdens and sorrows of this world. In the words of the text Paul is represented as looking upward and downward, forward and backward. He looked upward to his reward, downward to his heathen brethren, forward to the happy world which awaited him, and backward over his past life. He compares this life to a race. Each person had a course to run, which is prepared by God.
If we aimed we deviated from that course. It should be our duty to keep in the course allotted to us. It was not presumption, as some people thought for Christians to say that they were going to heaven. In the words of the text they are saved. That is one of the blessed assurances allowed by the grace of God.

Mr. Crossley closed his address by making appeal to those who hesitated to be prayed for to stand up, and a number responded.
After dismissing those desirous of leaving, an after-meeting was held, at which a number proffered repentance.
