ly, "and put me back on my pillows. Oh, this is easy; now pick up my shoe; see, it has fallen and I do not want to move; it makes me cough."

Brinley picked up the dainty satin shoe, and replaced it on the slender arch of her foot. It had never occurred to him to notice what a tiny, shapely foot it was; now he made fun of its size, and his own clumsiness, and said he thought the fairy Titania had left a rosebud in twain to supply Margery with a pair of such delightful little feet.

Lady Leigh, coming in, heard the remark, and thought enough of the sickness had given her daughter's beauty an added subtle grace unknown to her when she was a child, and she thought the fairy Titania had left a rosebud in twain to supply Margery with a pair of such delightful little feet.

In the spring, "that in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," and that, perhaps, who knows, hers might follow.

August was now drawing to a close. It had been a happy summer for Brinley, really anxious about the new apparent change in Bethel's looks, came and went frequently, and was fretting about one of his flying visits to Luffton, he returned to town, so unhappy about his heart's desire, as he called her to himself, that he went to see Margery and confide to her his troubles. To his surprise and regret he found her an invalid, her mother, who had been distracted through fear of losing her only child, confessed to Brinley that she feared her daughter was suffering about some secret trouble which was wearing the once healthy, sunny lass to the grave.

Brinley was greatly grieved to see his old friend and playmate so changed. She had grown thin, her eyes were shadowy and still. When Brinley first saw her, he was guided by Lady Leigh to an ante-room, looking down at her, he observed, "She lay by an open window wrapped in a cloudy dress of some white soft material which drew about her now slender form. Her blue eyes, looking unnaturally large and bright, were watching the soft summer clouds steal about the sunlit clouds of her side, calling upon her in tones of affectionate commiseration."

CHAPTER XXV.

"Is it Her Nature, or is it Her Will?"

"Margery, my dear girl, what is amiss with you?"

The shadowy hands were uplifted, as a sudden rapture transfigured the sick girl's face with a gleam of joy. Brinley took both her hands in his, with all the warmth of his old affectionate friendship when they had been boy and girl confidants.

"How should I know you would care? Besides, I did not wish to break in upon your present happiness with ill-lings, even of such an indifferent creature as myself." Then, in an altered tone she said, "But I should have seen you once more before the end; I made mamma promise that she would bring me, I think, and I have been waiting in coming, though our friend Pyne pretends such confidence of saving me."

She said all this calmly, as if it were a matter of course, and she took both her hands in his, with all the warmth of his old affectionate friendship when they had been boy and girl confidants.

WHORLER GALLOPED HOME A WINNER IN THE BROOKLYN

Feature at Gravesend Was Run in a Foot of Mud—General Sporting News.

THE TURF.

GRAVESSEND WINNERS. New York, June 13.—Amid the rousing cheers of the crowd and on a track that was foot deep in mud, Whorler galloped home an easy winner in the Brooklyn Derby at Gravesend today.

There were an average of 80 books at Gravesend every day doing business. H. T. Griffin, has split his stable, and sent the half of it to Chicago. The balance will race at the Metropolitan tracks.

Irish Lad now holds the record for the running of the Broadway Stakes. Old England won the race last year in 1:47 2-5, with 108 pounds up, while Irish Lad carried 126 pounds and negotiated the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47.

The hero of the Brooklyn didn't appear to be the least bit distressed after the race. Tommy Burns, who rode the colt, declared he didn't have to let him down at any stage of the race.

Billy Donohue and Johnny Campbell have made a hit in France, despite the prejudice supposed to exist against Americans in that country. Both now are at the heads of public stables in Chantilly, where Campbell, who trained Diano when he won the Brooklyn handicap, has 25 horses under his charge.

There was shrinkage in the breast-pad of the new track at Niagara Falls, Ont. A full meeting is on the programme. Jack Rombough, the famous Canadian reitman, is located at Hartford, Conn., with his prospective campaign.

The racing season at La Pointe, Wis., which was the worst last season, worked a half the other day in 1:08, final quarter in 33 seconds. This "winger" could step a 2-10 shot at Jewett's covered track a year this spring. At Ottawa last February, she stepped a mile in a winning race, over the ice in 2:13 1/2, which is very fast, considering that the world's record is only 2:13 1/2 for pacers.

BASEBALL.

THE UMPIRE. The umpire once there was meekness in his manner. He was humble in his bearing. Like a schoolboy that is late; he was late in his bearing. As he called the ball a strike; he was late in his bearing. For the umpire's name was Mike.

The umpire now: No more the droll is on his lip. No more his eye is looking up. No mighty monarch on his throne. His chest is forty-eight; his chest is forty-eight; his chest is forty-eight.

BOWLING. ACTIVITY IN ST. THOMAS. St. Thomas, June 12.—The St. Thomas Lawn Bowling Club will be well represented at the London tournament in July this year. Yesterday the entrance fee will be $1 for rinks and 25 cents for doubles and singles. All entries must be made by the 20th of June, so that the draw can be made.

The prizes, which will be both useful and valuable, are being donated by members and friends of the club. A list of which will be published before the day of play. Invitations have been received from Aylmer and London, and all players are requested to practice as much as possible, so that these clubs may be furnished with a good game.

STRATHROY BEATEN BY LONDON. On Friday afternoon three rinks of Strathroy bowlers were handily beaten by the same number from the London Rowing Club. The match, while not very close, was very interesting, and splendid work was done by several of the visitors. The closest match was on the Rowland-Smith rink, where the local team snatched their majority from the visitors at a critical moment.
