THINGS HEARD

Recent Session of Parliament Was Solemn.

Episodes-Neat Bulls Made by Several Members.

The recent session of the British Parliament has not been fruitful of what are called "new reputations." Men who emerged above the ruck in previous years have kept their enviable positions without greatly improving them. Some have made more excellent speeches than they had done before; others have failed to tarnish their laurels by making bad ones.

Warner, the member for Lichfield, who made the alarming discovery one night that "several of us are not here."

Just to prove that Scotsmen occasionally rival Englishmen and Irishmen in the making of bulls, Mr. Ritchie observed in a budget commitis a thorny question which is a bone of contention.
