A TOWN SINKS.

London, March 5.—Last night the people of Sandgate, county of Kent, were aroused by the rocking of houses and loud rumblings underground. Walls split, ceilings fell, foundations sunk and roofs fell. As the inhabitants fled to the streets they found large rents in the ground and were almost overcome by noxious vapors. Everybody supposed that the town was being shaken by an earthquake, and as the rumbling contimeed, hundreds fled in panie to the nearest towns. A few remained behind to remove their furniture from the falling houses. The reports carried abroad by the fugitives caused the troops in an adjacent made, crowds of armed Arabs gathered in front of the palace, but the speedy arrival of the British troops averted trouble. On Monday the Arabs flocked to the palace to swear allegiance to their new ruler. In replying to the royal speech, the Arab leaders assured the Sultan that they now realized the meaning of the protectorate and would support him in following the counsels of the Raelish.
